TAX SHARKS FACE CURB

TORONTO (CP) — Andre Ouellet, federal minister of consumer and corporate affairs, says he plans legislation to control profits of tax discounters who offer cash for income-tax refunds.

The high-profit, but legal, discounters prepare tax returns and pay in advance part of what a refund cheque is worth in exchange for the right to cash the refund cheque when it arrives.

Ouellet said consumers who go to discounters are victims of a heavy interest rate.

"They just don't realize how much they're charged," he said.

Refinery Plans Scrapped?

It appears unlikely the Social Credit government will proceed with the $350 million oil refinery project proposed by the former NDP administration.

"It hasn't been discussed in cabinet but I'd be very surprised if we go ahead," Transport Minister Jack Davis said Wednesday.

Former premier Dave Barrett immediately called it a "complete capitulation to the established international oil companies."

The 85,000-barrel-a-day refinery proposed for either Clinton or Merritt was meant to provide a gasoline supply for independent dealerships squeezed by the oil companies, said Barrett.

But Davis said the refinery would be a duplication of existing capacity in the Vancouver area and "it would be easier to expand the existing plants owned by private interests."

A B.C. government refinery would be very expensive and have excess capacity, said Davis. Premier Bennett said there is a surplus of gasoline in B.C. which is already causing a price war.

Last June the NDP government signed a letter of intent with the English firm Sim-Chem Ltd. to be the principal engineering contractor in the project. Discussions began between the B.C. Petroleum Corporation and the Alberta government to provide crude for the refinery, expected to begin production in 1981.

North Sea Hurricane

HAMBURG (UPI) — Hurricane winds of 75 miles an hour swept the North Sea coasts of Germany and Denmark early today, threatening dikes and flooding lowlands.

Hundreds of residents evacuated areas menaced by the rising waters and soldiers, firemen and volunteers worked during the night on dikes already weakened by damaging floods Jan. 3.

One death was reported. A 33-year-old West German was killed when winds swept his automobile into the path of an oncoming car.

Hardest hit by the new storm was the Hamburg area, the Schleswig-Holstein coast and low areas along the Elbe River.

SALT Talks Begin

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Leonoid Brezhnev opened nuclear-arms talks in the Kremlin with U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger today and said he hopes to go to Washington in the near future to sign the long-delayed new arms-limitation agreement.

Prisoner Names Killer Guard

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Andy Bruce, a British Columbia Penitentiary prisoner, Tuesday named a prison guard he said he saw fatally shoot classification officer Mary Steinhauser at the end of a 41-hour hostage ordeal at the prison in June.

Judge Philip Govan forbade publication of the guard's name.

Bruce made the statement to a preliminary hearing just before he, Clair Wilson and Dwight Lucas were committed for higher court trial on five charges arising from the incident.

Reading from a written statement, first published by the Prisoners Union Committee, an organization which works for improvement of prison conditions, Bruce said the guard first shot him in the jaw, then shot Miss Steinhauser.

Bruce cannot be cross-examined on the statement, which does not qualify as sworn testimony. However, Judge Govan ordered that the statement be placed in evidence before committing the three to trial on charges of illegally confining 15 persons, possession of offensive weapons, attempted escape, attempted extortion and robbery.

The robbery charge was added at the request of prosecutor Tom Fisher and the attempted escape charge was reduced from a charge of escape.

Bruce said neither the guard who shot Miss Steinhauser nor the other guards called a warning.

A guard smashed a window and "reached in through the window with his gun just as I was pulling Mary away from me with my right arm" he said.

"It was then that I saw his gun buck and I was hit in the jaw, once, then twice, in very quick succession," Bruce said, adding that he fell to his knees, with blood spurting from his jaw as he continued to watch the guard.

"I saw Mary out of the corner of my eye. She was just in front of me, down on her knees, but leaning to her right. She was trying to move toward me and she screamed 'don't shoot him.' "

As Miss Steinhauser screamed, the guard fired again and "Mary fell to her side in front of me," he added.

"Mary was hit by that bullet," he said. The guard fired again, this time through Bruce's stomach.

"I lay there for about five seconds and watched blood squirting out of my jaw before everything started to close in.

"I remember the last thought I had was that if I didn't move, the blood from my jaw would get into Mary's hair."

The guards, especially the one who fired the fatal shot, disliked both him and Miss Steinhauser, Bruce claimed.

He said prison director Dragan Cernetic had been aware of the animosity but "they give them guns in a situation like the hostage-taking."

He had never intended to harm Miss Steinhauser, he just wanted to get out of Canada, he said.

Earlier, Lucas told the court that he delighted in terrorizing the hostages in the vault because of the "bitterness" he had developed while in solitary confinement.

"I had fun terrorizing those people—I liked it, you know—they had been terrorizing me all my life. What they went through they call terror, but they don't know what terror is."

He told Judge Govan that most people don't care about

THE CONCORDE opened the age of supersonic passenger air travel today with a 4¼-hour flight from London to Bahrain — two hours faster than any other commercial jet. The plane was one of two identical aircraft that took off simultaneously from London (top picture) and Paris (bottom). The French Concorde is bound for Rio de Janeiro.

The Queen Waltzes Back

CANBERRA (AP) — Australia's new Conservative government today restored God Save the Queen as an Australian national anthem.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser said his government will also recognize Advance Australia Fair, Waltzing Matilda and Song of Australia as national anthems, but God Save the Queen must be played when the Queen or her representative is present.

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam's Labor government, which the Conservatives displaced, made Advance Australia Fair the country's sole anthem to empahsize Australia's independence from Britain, after a national poll in April 1974.

Fraser also announced that the government will again submit names of Australians to the Queen for British knighthoods and other British honors. Whitlam stopped this last year after he and the Queen established a separate Order of Australia system of honors for Australians, which Fraser will retain.

Land-Grab in Lebanon Prelude to Ceasefire?

BEIRUT — Thousands of Palestinian troops from Syria have driven Lebanese army troops from a strategic crossroads position and advanced into the foothills of Mt. Lebanon in an apparent attempt to grab as much territory as possible today before a ceasefire is called.

The clash, about 25 miles east of the war-ravaged capital, was the first between the Palestinians and the Lebanese army, and reinforced an all-out Palestinian and Moslem assault that left most of the countryside under Moslem control.

Official sources estimate 4,000 troops of the Syrian-based Palestine Liberation Army crossed into East Lebanon Tuesday to link up with another 4,000 massing around Chtoura in the Bekaa valley, 25 miles east of Beirut.

An air force reconnaissance plane brought back photos showing scores of army and police posts in the Bekaa region ablaze, one source said.

Lebanese army troops still held the hills between Chtoura and Zahlah and were pounding the guerrillas with heavy artillery, an army spokesman said.

The Syrian government was sending Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam and the Syrian army and air force chiefs to Beirut today to make another attempt at promoting a ceasefire and a Moslem-Christian political settlement.

Meanwhile, the Lebanese national police reported another 155 combatants on both sides killed in fighting at various points around the country and 184 wounded.

Raymond Edde, a leading Christian candidate to succeed President Suleiman Franjieh, told Beirut newspapers after a visit to the United States that a "plot to partition Lebanon is well under way," and although the U.S. government "does not want to get involved, it clearly blesses the partition."

Edde, the only Christian presidential aspirant who has close relations with Moslem factions, said in a telephone interview from Paris that the United States would be "delighted to have Lebanon's Moslem-populated northern and eastern regions given to Syria to make up for Syria's loss of the Golan Heights to Israel."

B.C. Apple Price Jump Forecast

KELOWNA (CP) — British Columbia consumers will be faced with price increases for apple products when the food price freeze ends, according to the general manager of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd.

Since the NDP government imposed the provincial price freeze in October, farmers have been picking up the tab because production and processing prices also were frozen, Ian Greenwood said Tuesday.

The Social Credit government is to decide Feb. 1 whether to continue the freeze.

Greenwood also said the worth of current federal or provincial controls is questonable unless the controls are equitable.

THIRTY MILLION REAON TO $ING

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Promoter Bill Sargent said today he has offered the Beatles $30 million to do a minimum of 20 minutes on closed-circuit television next July 5 anywhere they want in the world.

Sargent, who is promoting a March 9 "battle to the death" between a great white shark and a scuba diver to be televised world wide from Samoa, said of the offer: "I haven't heard yes and I haven't heard no."

"It's a natural sellout," the promoter said.

He said that he could get an audience of at least three million people on closed-circuit television at $25 a ticket.

"Everybody's been trying to get them together again, but I think I can do it," he said.

Sargent said he has spoken to lawyers for George Harrison and believes Harrison is interested.

He said if Harrison decides to do it, he believes the others would agree.

McGeer Won't Oppose $7,000 UBC Pay Hikes

Education Minister Pat McGeer says he will not interfere with salary hikes for University of B.C. faculty which range as high as $7,000 over one year.

The university, located in his Point Grey riding, has a faculty complement of 1,600, but because salaries averaging 17.3 per cent were settled before wage and price controls, increases are not restricted.

McGeer says it has always been the policy of government not to interfere with the inner workings of universities and "I hope it will always be."

The minister's announcement sparked a somewhat quizzical reaction from B.C. Teachers Federation president Bill Broadley in light of the fact that all teacher salary arbitration awards will be subjected to a rollback in line with the 10 per cent guidelines.

Broadley said today McGeer's policies are inconsistent.

"Arbitration awards are just as legal as a contract and to argue that on one hand there will be a rollback on binding arbitration awards for teachers is inconsistent if you can't do it for university professors," said Broadley.

McGeer, however, said universities in B.C. must be able to attract professors with world-wide reputations and must pay competitive salaries.

"You must remember that many people in our university system are not just outstanding in terms of B.C., they are world authorities and obviously we have to hold our share of world academicians.

"We wouldn't want our salary structure to be such that it would be impossible to have such people here."

Salaries paid faculty at University of Victoria from July 1, 1975 to June 30, 1976 are lower in all classifications ranging from a $1,300 discrepancy at the lecturer level to $11,000 difference at level of vice-president. (UBC has four vice-presients, UVic has one.)

Wages for UBC faculty were outlined in a confidential statistical analysis, and UVic bursar Bob McQueen provided the comparative figures for the campus here:

Lecturer, $17,222 at UBC, $15,420 at UVic; assistant professor, $21,598 at UBC and $19,903 at UVic; associate professor $25,305, compared to $24,588; professor at UBC, $33,209 compared with $33,156 on the Island; department heads, $40,618 and $34,713; deans $47,217 and $37,071; vice-presidents, $54,800 and $43,950; president $60,000 and $58,300.

Socreds Plan PR Overhaul

A full review of all government information services is being conducted by Social Credit advertising consultant Dave Brown.

Brown was appointed by cabinet this week for 90 days at about $150 a day.

Premier Bennett said Wednesday Brown's study will include public relations, advertising and publications and all press services provided by government departments, corporations and agencies.

Without providing a "propaganda bureau", said Bennett, the new government wants to correlate all information coming out of the government.

Any central information bureau would be designed to save money and time, rather than duplicate services, he said, and B.C.'s service would not parellel the "huge" system set up by the Alberta government with about 245 people.

Brown will also be looking at the new telephone information service set up late last year by the NDP government and Bennett said he hopes his complete report will be finished before the 90-day period since the government would like to have it before the next session of the legislature.

Brown, 46, was formerly with the Baker Lovick advertising agency in Vancouver and left the firm a year ago to do full-time consulting for the Socreds.

Person In the Way . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Bonner, new chairman of British Columbia Hydro, said Tuesday the crown coproation's new board will be "reconstituted" and will not include the position of executive director, now held by Jim Wilson.

Wilson, an appointee of the former New Democratic Party government, has not been offered any alternative position.

Bonner declined to use the word fired when asked about Wilson's position with B.C. Hydro. The position of executive director will be eliminated at the end of January, he said.

Wilson is the author of a book entitled People In The Way, which dealt with the resettlement planning for people displaced by the flooding of the Arrow Lakes for B.C. Hydro dam projects.

In his book, Wilson was critical of the "soft-headed, short-sighted" attitude of the former Social Credit government.

Bonner said Wilson was in accord with the reorganization of B.C. Hydro's board of directors.

'Please, Daddy . . .'

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Three armed bandits shot and killed a bus passenger because he refused to hand over a plastic bag he was carrying. Inside the bag were two bottles of milk, two notebooks, a pencil and note from the victim's child reading "Daddy: buy a 300-page notebook, one with 100 pages, and a pencil."

Welcome to Inuvik, the Land of the $7 Pizza

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

INUVIK, N.W.T.—Dear Miss Churcher of The Wall Street Journal:

Be glad that Queen Victoria did not have the opportunity to select Inuvik as the capital of Canada.

If this delightful community just north of the Arctic Circle, on the edge of the Mackenzie River delta, had existed when Queen Victoria was looking for a quaint and distinctively-Canadian capital and if she had fallen in love with Inuvik instead of good old stodgy Bytown, you would have more to complain about in your financial newspaper.

It's not that Inuvik is so cold, as most southerners would automatically assume.

Believe it or not, it has been warmer here for the last few days than it was when I left Ottawa in the middle of a not too uncommon cold snap. But then minus 30 degrees Celsius is warm up here.

It's not that Inuvik totally lacks culture. There's the Berger inquiry into the impact of a Mackenzie River Valley gas pipeline on the North that has just started a two-week stand at the Family Hall, within walking distances of every resident.

And there's always the fine selection of television. Thanks to the Anik satellite there's CBC North from Vancouver that gives residents of the western Arctic the distinction of having to stay up to midnight to watch the CBC National news.

It's just that everything is so expensive. And it's so difficult to go anywhere fast, unless you happen to work for or be friendly with an oil company.

Gasoline is more than $1 a gallon. And here you don't turn your car or truck off unless it is plugged in and starts well.

A simple necessity like a candy bar is 25 cents.

Breakfast is $3 in the local cafe, which is about what you would expect to pay at the ritzy Carleton Towers in Ottawa.

And talking about hotels: Here rooms are $39 to $45 a night, with a color television of course.

There's no real milk or fresh fruit juices available. The next shipment isn't due in until the summer. And the artificial stuff is 75 cents a glass.

A medium-sized pizza at the local pizzeria is $7. I haven't priced an A and W hamburger yet.

A taxi ride on the bumpy ice road to bustling Inuvik airport is $9 one way.

And it costs $600 to get here from Ottawa — that's equal to 10 trips to the cultural mecca,

Co-Op Housing Doomed?

Action taken by Housing Minister Hugh Curtis this week has led to speculation that inexpensive co-operative housing in British Columbia is doomed.

On Monday Curtis announced that housing units in the government's Passmore Place housing project in Saanich will now be sold freehold and not leasehold, as in the agreement arranged by the previous NDP government.

Curtis did make an exception of the 86 units to be turned over to the Marigold Co-operative Housing Association, in keeping with the original agreement.

NDP house leader Bill King sees the new policy as an incentive for speculators and a setback for young couples needing housing.

"By abandoning this altogether, they (the government) are assuring that only those with ample capital will be able to acquire such lots in the first instance," King said Tuesday.

Curtis could not be reached for clarification on whether the government intends to get out of the business of acquiring land for housing. He is on the Mainland viewing government housing projects until late tonight.

Both the Dunhill Development Corporation, the government agency handling the Passmore Place project, and housing department officials say they have no indication if Monday's move means an over-all change in land acquisition policy by the government.

A housing department spokesman said any policy changes will be announced by Curtis at the spring legislature.

"All our policies, right now, are under review," he said.

"We don't know where we are going," admitted Flo Bilinski, Vancouver Island co-op housing co-ordinator.

She said co-operative housing supporters fear land will have to be bought outright and eight per cent federal mortgages paid.

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan expressed disappointment at Curtis' decision.

"The concept of the leasehold policy he (former NDP Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson) developed shouldn't be abandoned, especially in view of the escalating costs of housing in the open market," he said.

Toronto, and back from Ottawa, or two trips to Europe and back.

But getting to Inuvik is a grind under the best of circumstances. It's a 12-hour journey on the way up, if the connections are good. And the stops are many.

But Pacific Western Airlines owned by Alberta, has just changed its schedule so that the noon flight arrives from Inuvik in Edmonton just in time to miss the last connection to Toronto and Ottawa by a few minutes. The next plane out leaves at one in the morning, eight hours later.

But then, what am I griping about? Inuvik, with its indoor plumbing and nice hotels, is a government town, surpassed only by the nearby oil exploration camps with their luxuries, including daily supplies of fresh foods.

And there are now five hours of daylight.

CoL Increase Dips in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. inflation rate last December climed 0.5 per cent, making a 7 per cent increase for all of 1975, the smallest yearly rise in three years, the labor department said today.

The increase in the Consumer Price Index, measured on a December-to-December basis, was well below the 12.2 per cent jump during 1974 and the 8.8 per cent climb in 1973.

Administration economists have been predicted for several months that inflation levels would gradually moderate after the steep increases during 18 months of recession.

One of those economists, assistant commerce secretary James Pate, said today the improvement last year was "a little bit greater than what the administration anticipated."

But he cautioned the improvement will be more gradual in 1976, when inflation is expected to be about 6 per cent.

"The improvement is becoming more gradual," he said, "but in perspective it is substantial when compared to the 12 per cent level of last year."

Service cost increases were a major factor behind inflation during December and the full year. Pate predicted the prospect for better mortgage interest rates might soon ease the pressure on service prices.

McGeer Won't Oppose Hikes

McQueen said the differences in salary levels at the two B.C. campuses, reflect "the different nature of the two universities."

UBC, he said, is quite different and offers a broader, more extensive program. "You're comparing a university with many professional programs with what is essentially a liberal arts program here."

"The difference is bound to be reflected in salaries."

Salary increases at UVic for this year range from the president's increase $55,000 to $58,300 to higher increases at the lecturer level; from $13,060 to $15,420, excluding increments.

UVic, said McQueen, is attempting to offer salaries relative to the rest of Canada, and is succeeding for the most part.

Compared to salaries paid at University of Washington in Seattle, the two B.C. campuses are ahead.

Average pay for a full professor at U of W is $23,537, associate professors get an average of $17,280 and assistant professors get $14,127. Medical and dental facilities are excluded from the figures.

At UBC, the average faculty pay hike for the current year was 17.3 per cent, meaning an average increase for all faculty of $3,934.

At UVic the average faculty pay hike for the current year was 15.7 per cent, plus increments.

At U of W, the increase was 12 per cent last year. According to administrators there, faculty is hoping to get five per cent hikes, although they expect to get nothing "in view of the financial climate."

McGeer's reaction, when told about UBC pay increases, was that he "had been robbed out there" because his salary increase was $4,900, a 20.16 per cent increase from $24,300 last year.

The education minister is a psychiatrist and neurologist and is listed at $29,200 for the 1975-76 year at UBC. While at the legislature, he is on leave of absence.

Included in the UBC pay hikes are raises of more than $7,000 for six faculty members; hikes between $6,000 and $7,000 for 16 members and 146 faculty members got raises between $5,000 and $6,000.

MPLA Says Zaire Bombing Angola

Times News Services

LONDON — The Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) accused Zaire today of the aerial bombing and strafing of towns in eastern Angola.

A communique from the MPLA, read over the movement's Luanda radio and monitored here, said three fighter-bombers attacked Cacombo and Lumbala Sunday and later carried out another raid.

Cazambo is about 90 miles south of Teixera de Souza which Luanda radio reported last Thursday was attacked by a fighter-bomber coming from Zaire.

Zaire actively supports the National Front for the Liberation of Angola (FNLA) against the MPLA. The FNLA is allied with a third movement, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA).

The MPLA also claimed to have captured the key supply town of Cela in a major offensive they said had opened up the road to Angola's southern capital of Huambo.

Spokesmen for western-backed forces said the attack against Cela had been crushed short of its goal.

As the military situation deterioriated, Jonas Savimbi, leader of the western-supported National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA), flew to Kinshasa, Zaire, for discussions with President Mobutu Sese Seko and his Angolan coalition partner, Holden Roberto of the National Front for the Liberation of Angola (FNLA).

UNITA officials said the pro-Soviet Angolan troops appear to be playing a second-ary role to the Cubans in the fighting for control of the former Portuguese colony.

They said the Soviet-armed troops are regrouping for a second and possibly decisive assault.

The spokesmen said the MPLA has been reinforced for the attack by Cuban troops, Soviet advisers, helicopter gunships, Russian T-54 tanks and 122mm rockets.

In an interview with the Times of London, MPLA Information Minister Joao Filipe Martins said the Marxists soon would capture Huambo and the coastal towns of Lobito and Benguela.

"Once we have taken these, the National Union will be finished," Martins was quoted as saying.

Meanwhile, Mandungu Bula Nyati, the commissioner of state for Zaire, said in a letter to UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim the pro-Soviet forces have disrupted his country's copper exports on the railway line, destroyed rail bridges and bombed a Zaire town on the Angolan border.

He called the bombing "an act of war . . . threatening the sovereignty, territorial integrity and security of the republic of Zaire."

Plane Crashes, All Rescued

A light aircraft crashed late Tuesday while landing on the beach at Rufi Bay, near Cape Scott on the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

Pacific Air Sea Rescue spotted the plane early today and airlifted three passengers and a dog to Port Hardy, a spokesman said.

The Cessna 180, owned by Island Copper Ltd., was making a regular flight from Port Hardy when the mishap occurred.

The unidentified passengers were not injured.

conditions in solitary but that "people will be getting killed on the street" by ex-convicts releasing their bitterness over the penal system.

Lucas also confirmed Bruce's description of what happened at the end of the incident.

Judge Govan began to tell the convicts that there "is much in what you have said" when Wilson interrupted.

Wilson said that while solitary confinement was supposed to have been eliminated at the B.C. Pen (because of a recent Federal Court of Canada decision labelling it cruel and unusual punishment) there have been few changes.

There is only one way to get changes and "you know what that is," he said.

At this point several spectators shouted: "Revolution."

In committing the three for trial, Judge Gogan told the prosecutor that the Crown might consider staying the charges.

He said he "wondered about the utility of further charges" against the prisoners, all of whom are serving life sentences.

"If this would be an abuse of process—if nothing else can happen (to the three)—there can be an application to stay the charges," said Govan.

Fisher then brought up the matter of a further charge against Lucas of assaulting a guard.

Shouted Wilson: "You know what you can do with that."

Wilson repeated the comment several times as the matter was put over until next Tuesday.

the weather

An approaching Pacific disturbance crossed the northern coast this morning and will cross the south coast tonight. It will weaken as it passes through the interior Thursday. Rain over the northern coast will spread into the south this evening but only a little precipitation will penetrate into the interior. A southwesterly flow of moist air will produce clouds over most of the province behind the disturbance with a few showers along the coast and snowflurries inland. Temperatures will continue mild today but should be lower Thursday.

CO-OP GROUP PLANNING TO SUE

The co-operative group seeking the licence to Channel 10 for Cable TV will go to court next month against the Canadian Radio-Television Commission for its refusal to hear its application.

If Capital Cable Co-operative is successful Feb. 2 in the Federal Court Trial Division, Vancouver, the CRTC will suspend its scheduled hearing of Victoria Cablevision Ltd.'s application for licence renewal, set for Feb. 5 at the Empress Hotel.

According to the CRTC, only renewal applications and interventions may be heard at its sitting Feb. 5, and not applications competing for the licence already held.

The current licence for Channel 10 expires March 31 and CCC wants it in order to carry a new level of community-oriented programs on a non-profit basis.

Tot Ad Changes On Way

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Association of Broadcasters announced changes Tuesday in its broadcasting code for advertising aimed at children.

The changes included a lowering to age 12 from 13 in the age limit for identifying child viewers and listeners and a limit of one year on use of the word new in describing a product.

The changes also extended the ban on using cartoon characters in children's advertising to include "persons costumed like well-established characters or puppets."

The association, which includes television and radio stations across the country, said member stations have been asked to submit lists of programs directed at children under 12 to the Advertising Standards Council to help in enforcing the rules.

The advertising code sets limits on the frequency and content of commercials directed at children.

THINGS THAT GO BUMP on a winter's day in Prince George are usually boys skimming down a hill on any kind of conveyance they can find — even an old inner tube. Despite the bumps, however, these two lads say they can hardly wait for the ride to end to go back to the top of the hill and start again.

Cordova Parents Push School Plan

A group of Cordova Bay parents is pushing for a community school to ease, among other things, boredom among teenagers.

The boredom, several parents told Saanich Peninsula School board, is likely one of the causes of under-age drinking.

A meeting at Cordova Bay elementary attracted 70 parents interested in the concept.

A community school, said one parent who asked not to be identified, would help adults pull together more in a neighborhood atmosphere and work on a solution to the boredom problem.

"It's not only drinking, but driving and drinking by teenagers that is the concern here," she said.

Parents urged that the elementary school become a focal point for around-the-clock community activities and a co-ordinator be appointed to organize agencies and use of facilities.

School board chairman Gerry Kristianson said Tuesday the difficulty faced by the board is the expense of hiring a co-ordinator:

"It's expensive, between $15,000 and $20,000, and we don't have that kind of money."

But he urged the parents to hold a public meeting to assess support for the concept and he outlined the possibility of funding from a provincial government department, like human resources.

"If the group can demonstrate to the board that the community desires a change in the education process then it's our responsibility to listen," he said.

"The problem arises in trying to differentiate between the wishes of the minority and the majority."

Kristianson, however, says that Cordova Bay is an ideal community for the community school concept and he agrees that more evening use could be made of the school — not necessarily the gym which is fully booked, but classrooms.

'Moneybags' Facing Park Tap

North Saanich council will name a committee to inquire into the feasibility of tapping "money-bags" living along or around the waterfront to buy two acres on Wain Road for a nature park.

Mayor Paul Grieve said between $35,000 and $42,000 is needed, and he thinks most of the money can be raised from affluent persons who pay half their income to the income tax department.

He said donors would not feel the pinch too much.

"Gifts would be 50 per cent deductible from corporation taxes," he said.

"You may think that an unduly cynical way to collect money for a park."

"Yes," responded Ald. George Cumpston. "That's the cynical way people look at their charitable donations."

Grieve said the land would be owned by the Nature Conservancy of Canada until paid for, and would then be turned over to the municipality.

Ald. George Westwood and Ald. Cumpston opposed the plan.

Westwood was opposed because the land would not be open to the public, being classed as a nature conservancy and left in its natural state.

The land is timbered — one of the last such areas in the municipality.

Two Bird Blinds, Wharf in Works For Swan Lake

Two winter bird blinds and a wharf on the northern edge of Swan Lake will be built as the first phase of the Swan-Lake-Christmas Hill nature centre.

One blind will overlook an oat field that is flooded in winter, with a floating boardwalk being provided for access.

The other will overlook a flooded field immediately below the firehall.

Saanich's environment committee was told Tuesday the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill Nature Centre Society has a federal Local Initiatives Program grant to cover costs.

Teresa Shepard, a biologist, who is acting as naturalist for the society, said the group is still seeking donations for rough cedar and other materials for the project.

Future stages of the centre's development include stationary and floating boardwalks with handrails, a viewpoint at the top of Christmas Hill and trails.

Shepard said, as of December, all the land surrounding the lake has been purchased for the centre.

At some time in the future a model farm is planned.

Shepard said both university and high school students are already making extensive use of the centre.

The committee approved an environment group be set up to help in various environmental projects in the municipality. It will be headed by consultant biologist Dr. Bob Langford. Other members will be Gerry Chaster, assistant parks administrator; David Harper of the planning department, Frank Neate of the engineering department and municipal administrator Bill Tremayne.

On Tremayne's suggestion, Saanich will enter into a five-year management contract with the society on the control and development of the centre.

25% Pay Boost Urged For 4,500 at CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — Conciliation Commissioner Stanley Hartt has recommended a 25 per cent wage increase in a two-year contract for 4,500 CBC employees represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

A union spokesman said Tuesday that Hartt recommended an increase of 17 per cent in a two-year contract, retroactive to July 1.

He proposed a further increase of eight per cent, plus a cost-of-living clause, in the second year of the contract.

Federal anti-inflation guides generally limit wage increases of employees covered by the controls to a basic 10 per cent in the first year of a contract. But the anti-inflation board is empowered to make exceptions if it feels groups have fallen behind.

It also can allow increases above the basic ceiling in cases where one group has historically had wage parity with another similar group of workers.

CUPE represents clerical staff, announcers, cameramen, designers, tradesmen and laborers. They now earn between $97 and $343 a week and the union has been seeking an increase of 31 per cent in a one-year contract.

The CBC, a federal crown corporation, has offered 12 per cent and 8½ per cent in a two-year contract.

Hartt said in his report that the government guides have not yet been adequately defined and "I have determined once again to recommend the same settlement that I would have recommended in the absence of the anti-inflation guidelines."

NEVER ON SUNDAY

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — The Alabama court of criminal appeals has upheld a state law which, a dissenting judge pointed out, makes Sunday open season for cheque forgers.

The court said Tuesday it had no choice but to follow an earlier decision by the state supreme court, which ruled that a cheque given on Sunday is void and cannot be used to make a forgery case.

The ruling nullified the forgery conviction and eight-year prison term of Roosevelt Williams in Madison County. He had been found guilty of forging a $45 cheque on a Sunday last January.

Judge John DeCarlo said in his dissent there is something "inherently wrong with the logic which makes it no crime to forge a cheque" on Sunday and makes it a crime any of the other six days of the week.

The New Society Under Wraps

The professor has delivered another lecture in a series that might be called how to stop worrying, or learning to live with the new society. Despite rumblings from his own faculty, not to mention hysteria in the university at large, the teacher has not backed down on his original thesis that the free market system does not exist in Canada. The only real difference from previous lectures is that Pierre Trudeau says the free market system is not the free enterprise system. Apparently the former never existed here, and the latter is a sometime thing, confined to certain industries.

What we have here is a routine statement of the obvious. The prime minister has had to repeat it so many times one would think the country is slightly retarded. A country that subsidizes industries, grants them handsome tax concessions and protects their markets with high tariffs is not by any definition a free market economy. As for free enterprise, it flourishes in Canada, although private enterprise would be a more accurate term to define the monopolies and oligarchies that control many key industries.

The prime minister was careful this time round to reject socialism or statism as alternatives to our faltering mixed system. "The issue," he said, "is whether we are prepared to adjust the system, through changes in legislation, institutions and attitudes . . ."

Yet even a statement of this problem facing every western capitalist country brings hoots of derision and fierce accusations from both labor and business. It is almost as if these economic segments, settled in their comfortable pews, don't want to be told the truth. It would seem they prefer to go on living an unreal national dream of more, when every signpost signals less.

In effect, Trudeau is saying both our economic system and values are out of date. What do you want to do about these things? he asks. The answer from business and labor is to castigate the man for even bringing up the topic in polite conversation. As inflation rolls along at 9.8 per cent and unemployment at 7.3 per cent, it would seem debate is long overdue.

But the professor still frightens his students. Even before the debate gets underway, he seems impatient for the final exam. The choice is up to us, he says, but if we don't make the right choice he implies the government will make it for us. That's like Henry Ford's old saw that you could have any color of car as long as it is black.

We are free to choose as long as we make the right choice. It is as much Trudeau's presentation as what he says that riles. Vague allusions to "redistribution of the wealth" and "different values" are meaningless unless placed in context. Too many unknowns exist. We need more known values if we are to work on this new equation so haphazardly tossed among us by the prime minister.

The ironies inherent in a system where monopolistic banks oppose government intervention in the economy yet ask Ottawa to control their other financial competitors should not be overlooked. Oil industry advertisements praise the free enterprise system while the same companies are happy with massive government investment in projects such as Syncrude. Perhaps it is time we took off the rose-colored glasses and examined our undisciplined economic system in harsh northern glare, rather than the dawn's early light so comfortable all these years. The country is obviously at the starting point of a serious debate about Canada's future. Free enterprise still exists along with a free society. The prime minister says his government is committed to fostering these things. Given such ground rules, even the most timid Canadian should not fear debate.

Puzzling Opposition

The reaction of Henderson Road residents to something as seemingly non-controversial as a bicycle path was amazingly vehement. Judging from reports, an observer would think that plans were afoot to run cement trucks down the Oak Bay thoroughfare every 15 minutes, and not quiet two-wheelers.

The street now is hardly a peaceful residential backwater. Henderson is a main bus route with service three times an hour in the daytime, and the most direct route to the University of Victoria for anyone living in most of Victoria and parts of Oak Bay and Saanich.

We are frankly puzzled at the reaction to the bikeway in this part of Oak Bay. It is something which Oak Bay residents, used to quiet residential life, should encourage. Bicycles and cyclists emit no nauseous fumes, make next to no annoying noise and travel at much safer speeds than motor vehicles — a significant consideration, for there are a large number of children in the area who cross Henderson to attend Uplands elementary school.

And if numbers of drivers can be enticed out of their machines onto two-wheelers by the prospect of a safe bicycle path separated from main streets, that seems a goal worth chasing. A bicycle path will ease congestion on Henderson, not aggravate it as some residents feel. It would be appreciated by their bike-riding children — and should be appreciated by parents concerned about their safety on the roads now.

". . . messy? . . . yeah, so were Hiroshima and Nagasaki . . ."

TOM WICKER

Lying Is a Contagious Habit

NEW YORK — Representatives of the U.S. senate intelligence committee, the Ford administration and the so-called "intelligence community" have started joint discussions on what, if any, reforms are needed in that community. Unfortunately, the most far-reaching proposal — the prohibition of covert operations abroad — appears to have been rejected in advance.

My Favorite Unannounced Presidential Candidate was recently quoted in this space, with approval, in advocacy of just such a prohibition. Since My Favorite Candidate keeps a low profile, I was called upon to defend his view in a brief debate on ABC television with William Rusher, publisher of the conservative weekly, National Review.

Rusher — terrifyingly articulate as always — managed to state his position in four precise sentences:

Freedom in Chile?

"Short of throwing away our weapons and disbanding the armed forces, a decision to end all covert activities by our government abroad is the most dangerous position I can think of.

"We live in a world where the Soviet Union, Red China and Cuba all engage in covert action every day — supporting their friends and undermining ours. For us to abandon ours would make the outcome inevitable in country after country.

"Among other things, it would probably destroy the prospects for greater freedom in both Chile and Spain."

Let us pass over the irony of Rusher's citation of Chile, where the United States' covert "destabilization" efforts did as much as anything to produce the repressive Pinochet government, and the effrontery of his proposition that only through American covert actions are the Spanish people likely to attain "greater freedom."

Bypassing also the question of international morality (lest we be accused of having soft noses), My Favorite Candidate and I state the case for prohibition of covert operations as follows:

Conducting what are euphemistically called "dirty tricks" against other governments inevitably forces the administration in Washington to lie and cover up. The habit of lying and covering up becomes contagious and spreads to conceal or misrepresent other government activities.

Lying and covering up is not only wrong in itself but when confidence in the integrity of government already is at a low ebb, it suffers further every time the administration or the president is caught out in a lie or a cover-up.

As for a strong and effective American foreign policy, its development would be helped, not hindered, by restored confidence at home in the government's credibility, and restored confidence abroad in American devotion to the principles of self-determination and a world made "safe for diversity."

The mere existence of a huge bureaucracy with a secret budget and trained spooks encourages — even creates pressures on an American president to turn to covert operations he might not otherwise undertake, often as a short cut or an expediency rather than from real necessity.

Nixon's plumbers and their Watergate operation suggest the danger that covert techniques developed for use against other nations may be imported for domestic action — not only assassinations but, more ominously, the habit of using secret, extra-legal means to accomplish purposes not easily achieved by ordinary political processes.

We're Different

Even if in giving up all covert operations some useful end that could only be accomplished secretly had to be foregone, the sacrifice would be worth it when weighed against the dangers and disadvantages of most covert operations, and the disastrous failure of many, the Bay of Pigs fiasco, for one notable example.

Besides, as Rusher's argument illustrates, the case for covert operations is essentially that "they're doing it to us, so we have to do it to them." Aside from the fact that we more often do it to Chile, Guatemala, Greece and the like than to the Soviet Union or China, this argument misses the vital point that we count ourselves different from them.

My Favorite Unannounced Presidential Candidate says he'd like to see us act as if we really were.

The Party's Over

Although not in the habit of writing letters to the paper, I am so incensed by the stupidity of those citizens whose letters the Times seems to favor. Now I feel I must state my opinion which surely must also be the opinion of many thinking citizens.

The new provincial government has barely had a chance to evaluate the grim mess it has inherited. The people have spoken and now it is up to all of us to pull together.

Do not these complainers ever read or think? Do they not realize that something has to be done to get this province of B.C. back into some sort of order?

Of course it will be tough — it has to be and we should all be prepared for it. The party is over! It is surely time people realize that they have been living beyond their means and the economy cannot stand it.

Everything that is not strictly necessary must be thrown out at this time.

And what is the government? Do not people realize that no government can function without money from industry and the workers? No one with compassion would wish to deprive those in real need of help, let alone the government. But nothing is "free." It all has to be paid for by you and me. And if there is no money left to hand out there would have to be an end to it. You cannot get blood from a stone.

The former premier gave himself and his ministers huge salaries. Do some of your correspondents think that this was the right thing to do? Surely not!

Mr. Editor, I was under the impression that your paper was considered independent and not biased! — Sylvia M. Boure, R.R. 1, Cobble Hill.

Moral Responsibility

The policy of the recently elected New Zealand government to ignore UN decisions and allow South African all-white sports teams to come to our country is already having international sporting repercussions. Filbert Bayi, 1,500 metre world record-holder of Tanzania, has cancelled his trip to New Zealand to run against John Walker, one-mile world record-holder. Now some teams have withdrawn from the World Softball Championships to be held in New Zealand this month, and for the same reason. That reason is that an all-white South African softball team has been invited by the New Zealand Softball Association. As a result, five out of the 12 teams invited, are now not coming. We note that Canada, the probable winner of the tournament, is still intending to come. We believe that if they persist in doing so they will do great harm to world and New Zealand sport — not to mention the harm they will do to Canadian sport. There is still time for the Canadian team to withdraw also, and we urge them to do so. We believe that Canada's moral responsibility is as great as New Zealand's. — A. Ostler, M. Ostler, C. V. Walter, Auckland, New Zealand.

No lids from his department, says new minister Rafe Mair.

Canning Lids

Because the former minister of consumer services has made a number of statements concerning canning lids, I would like to take this opportunity to make the position of my department perfectly clear.

We are no less concerned about the problem of the supply of canning lids and the effect that that has upon people who wish to do their own canning. We only differ in the method of solving the problem.

The former minister feels that the difficulties wil be solved if everyone who requires canning lids writes to my department and advises me of their needs. There are a number of reasons why this is not a sensible approach to take.

My mail indicates that a great many people misunderstood the suggestion to mean that our department will transmit orders for canning lids and see that they are filled by manufacturers. This we are totally unequipped to do and even if we did undertake such a task it is obviously not what a government department ought to undertake.

Unless everybody who requires canning lids made their needs known, any statistics we get would be absolutely meaningless and unquestionably would result in a serious shortage of supplies. It is a matter of simple mathematics. If only one-half of the people requiring canning lids make their requirements known to my department and this information is passed on to the manufacturers and suppliers, only one-half of the requirements of the community will in fact be supplied.

I have asked our research division to work in conjunction with consumer groups and do everything possible to alleviate this recurring situation. I am prepared to see that everything humanly possible is done by this department and agencies with which it works, to solve this problem.—K. Rafe Mair, Minister of Consumer Services.

Grave Oversight

As reported in the Times, our new minister of mines, Thomas Waterland stated that he "disagreed with the idea that ore is a non-renewable resource which is being depleted."

Surely, as a professional mining engineer, the minister must know what he is talking about. He might even know an alchemic formula for the renewal of mineral ores.

If so, he should be cajoled into revealing it, for the benefit of us all. — John Willow, 1644 Rockland Avenue.

Infringing Channels

I must strongly object to the current proposal for modification and adjustment of cable television in Vancouver South.

I encourage the expansion of CBC French service on UHF in our general area despite its extremely limited viewing audience.

The major American networks do provide a great deal of our variety and any infringement on such would be most unacceptable.

Quite plainly, the vast majority of my constituents would be required to purchase or rent a convertor just to maintain the status quo.

During this period of fiscal restraint by the federal government, I find it most presumptuous that the transmission tower has been constructed without the prior approval of the CRTC.

I have had many phone calls and letters from people in Vancouver South expressing their concern and disappointment.

I trust that the quest for national unity will not be achieved at the cost of encouraging anti-Americanism. — C. Stephen Rogers, M.L.A. for Vancouver South.

Foreign Influence

Regarding the American cable controversy, I would be sorry if we could not see American programs. But I bitterly resented the interference of a Bellingham station in the recent B.C. election. I wasn't sure I was in Canada at all, so insistent was the demand that I elect a pro-American government, namely the Social Credit party. Even when the results were in, the gloating of the announcer on the Bellingham station was most offensive. Now B.C. has a pro-American government, said the voice over the television.

I would have been glad if we could have elected a pro-Canadian government, but then I am a Canadian. The great danger in the above interference is that some time we may find a politician stooping to buy time to defeat the opposition and we will not be able to recognize what is happening and we may find ourselves unable to elect a government of our choice.

I firmly believe that a commission of inquiry should be appointed to inquire into the affair of the foreign advertising on television. Someone paid the Bellingham station for the ads and the people of B.C. have a right to know who.

Who paid for the shoplifting commercials? The people of B.C. should be interested in knowing who paid a television station to slander their young people.—Kathleen English, 740 Burdett Street.

Electoral Reform

It is indeed pathetic to see the sudden and great interest of Mr. J. V. Clyne in the democratic process in B.C. and I note that at a recent service club he urged the new Socred government to bring in electoral reforms on the basis of the preferential vote. Otherwise we would have to face the possibility of a return to power of an NDP government. What a tragedy?

However, I do not recall that in the 20 years that the former Socred government was in power he ever showed such great interest in the democratic process although the Socreds never had a majority vote. However this apparently did not worry Mr. Clyne as the Socred government of that age was doing the bidding of the "big business interests."

This is why I feel that it is so pathetic that he is now showing such great interest in a change. I would also point out that it was the present premier's father who changed the electoral procedures which kept him in power for some 20 years. However it is indeed encouraging to see the great interest Mr. Clyne is taking in the democratic process in this province. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

From the Times of January 21, 1916

The medical profession has sent richly of its members to the services of healing thesick and wounded soldiers who come back from the battle line. Victoria has seen many of her leading practitioners, but the first woman doctor to volunteer her services is Dr. Gertrude Flumerfelt who with her husband Dr. Jefferson will leave next Friday for England. She is the daughter of Victoria banker A. C. Flumerfelt and was born in Victoria, although she spent much of her life abroad pursuing studies which culminated in a medical degree.

Clarify Teacher Status

THE TORONTO STAR
(An Editorial)

When teachers are not telling the public what a dedicated profession they are — and how much we shall have to pay to keep them dedicated — they talk exactly like hard-nosed trade unionists.

Wearing his cloth cap instead of his mortarboard, a teacher wrote a letter to the editor to say that teachers should be expected to engage in strikes and noisy, rude demonstrations.

"The teachers," he said, "are using the same methods to get a fair wage increase as have other workers. Why should a teacher not use similar methods as a Falconbridge nickel worker or a postal worker to achieve similar ends?"

Why not indeed, if they are simply another group of laborers for hire? But that is not what the law says they are, and the teachers are in fact profiting from a law which defines them as something quite different.

The Teaching Profession Act of 1944 recognized the Ontario Teachers' Federation as the governing body of the teaching profession — not the teaching trade — with the following as its first two objectives:

(a) "To promote and advance the cause of education."

(b) "To raise the status of the teaching profession."

To better serve these high aims, the act required all teachers in publicly controlled schools to join the federation, and required all teachers in publicly controlled schools to join the federation and re- and required school boards to deduct the dues from their salaries. Their association thus has privileges that few if any unions enjoy — a closed shop and dues checkoff established by law.

Then last year, in Bill 100, the ultimate weapon of trade unionism, the right to strike, was added to their prerogatives. The Star, which supported it at the time, would now qualify that right.

The teachers shouldn't be allowed to have it both ways. They are either professionals or trade unionists. If they are professionals, they should forego the right to strike. If they are trade unionists which is what they appear to be in practice, they should be denied the privileges of the Teaching Profession Act. They should have to enrol members and win certification like any other union, and then bargain for the checkoff and other gains. They should also have to accept principals and vice-principals for what they are — management, not union labor.

If their right to strike is continued, it should be with the proviso that they may be replaced whenever the elected authorities decide that a strike has reached the point of causing unacceptable damage to public education.

Wagner Ducks Fund Queries

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Vancouver Sun

There are, at the moment, five serious candidates left in the stumbling race toward the Tory leadership. They are Claude Wagner, Brian Mulroney, Flora MacDonald, Sinclair Stevens and Paul Hellyer.

It drives bananas the card-carrying faithful that two of the five, the first and last names, are ex-Liberals, opportunists both. The only reason they fake it as Conservatives is because they have stepped into a lower league, not being able to hit the pitching in their original faith.

Two Stages

Hellyer, of course, took his sulk through a two-stage rocket, losing a cabinet argument over housing later although deputy prime minister, and taking a lonesome walk through something called Action Canada, which had roughly the intellectual appeal of the UFO, before passing through journalism on the way to the heights of Torydom. In Monopoly he'd have to spend a lot of time in Jail because of his erratic trafficking.

CLAUDE WAGNER

Mr. Wagner hit the sulks because of losing the Quebec Liberal leadership to the moneyed Robert Bourassa and chose a different cleansing agent — the Bench — before emerging from the shower as a Tory. His quickie passage through town this week demonstrated once again his aloof attitude toward mere mortals and his unfitness to become a leader of the Tories, let alone prime minister.

Silly Hosts

Among other things, Wagner has a dumb organization. Several weeks back, it invited to a "private" 1 p.m. luncheon Wednesday at the Hyatt Regency a group of backroom Tory heavyweights and several innocents not knowing what they were getting into. The only trouble was that the same silly hosts scheduled a press conference for 2 p.m.—same hotel, same locale. All the reporters had to do was to stand at the door and watch what came out.

Mr. Wagner did not gain friends among the bagmen with that caper.

Secondly, before the humble press. Mr. Wagner refused to discuss the subject on which he is most vulnerable: The fact that he has not entirely been telling the truth for three years on his $300,000 slush fund.

It is really getting embarrassing since last Saturday when Jonathan Manthorpe, a fine reporter with the Globe and Mail, unveiled the last story in his investigation of Mr. Wagner's entry into Tory federal politics. The entry was arranged just before the 1972 election with the provision of a $300,000 persuader by party sources.

On Sept. 5, 1972, the day he resigned as a Quebec Sessions Court judge, Wagner said, "I have no need of, I have not asked for, nor have I ever been offered any pension fund or financial compensation." Manthorpe reports: "This caused a few raised eyebrows among some of the people in the audience. About 10 of them had helped put together the statement and they had all listened to Mr. Wagner read the final draft the day before. That sentence had not been in there."

The first payment from the slush fund was delivered by hand to Mr. Wagner's home on Oct. 26, 1972, four days before the election.

Wagner, the former judge who wants to be prime minister, has only admitted in the last few months — following the original Manthorpe story — that such a fund exists.

At his press conference here Wednesday, he refused to comment on the latest Globe story. Would he deny it? I asked. Would he confirm it? He refused to do either, instead launching into a pious excuse that it would be a sorry thing if the prime minister's chair were open only to millionaires. Of course it would, but who needs a million when one is already $300,000 on the way there?

It is no surprise, by the way, that Mr. Wagner's ludicrous concept of how to win a leadership race involved his famous $1,000-a-plate dinner in Montreal (in the middle of wage-and-price guidelines) that now has been cancelled. You will recall, we trust, that Mr. Wagner's campaign chairman in B.C. — Hanging MP John Reynolds — was the very first Tory in the leadership race almost a year ago. One of the over-reachers of our time, he scheduled a $100-a-plate dinner in the Hotel Vancouver.

Mr. Wagner cancelled his fiasco when a reported 20 seats were sold. Reynolds got about the same support before he aborted. The ante has risen 10-fold but their sense of reality remains as distorted.

Of course Mr. Wagner does not want to discuss with the press his $300,000 nestegg. Neither would you if you hadn't been telling the truth for three years. Do you want a man like this vying for the prime ministership? I don't.

Exposing CIA Agents Is New Game In Europe

CIA CHIEF'S MURDER MANIPULATED BY FORD

By ANTHONY LEWIS

The murder of Richard S. Welch, the Central Intelligence Agency station chief in Athens, was a piece of cowardly terrorism. No past abuse by the CIA can justify random crimes against its officers. That should not need saying.

Understandably, the Welch case has brought to a boil the resentment felt by CIA veterans at critics of the agency. Many honorable and brave persons have worked there over the years, often providing wiser analyses than any other source, and they may well resent the idea that the public lumps them in with tricksters and would-be assassins.

But it is another matter entirely to use the murder of Richard Welch as a political device, as President Ford and his National Security assistants are evidently trying to do now. Ceremonies honoring a respected government servant were manipulated in order to arouse a public backlash against legitimate criticism.

Immediately after the murder, CIA officials sought to put the blame on an obscure left-wing organization, Fifth Estate, that has published the names of U.S. agents, including Welch's. The CIA director, William E. Colby, denounced the group's behavior as "irresponsible and paranoic."

As a matter of evidence, it is exceedingly unlikely, that recent publication of Welch's name was responsible for his death. His cover in Athens was extremely thin. He lived in a house known by many to have been used by CIA station chiefs for years. His function was hardly a secret.

Leading CIA figures in many foreign capitals have in fact made little effort to conceal their role. The home of one in Europe was casually pointed out to me recently. They all tend to be listed under similar, unconvincing titles in State Department registers. The CIA could and should provide deeper cover to meet what may be a new kind of terrorist threat.

Colby's denunciation plainly had a larger purpose; to make the case that the CIA needs more secrecy in general than it has been getting lately. It was easier to make that argument in terms of some minor left-wing group than by attacking the congressional committees whose probing has really agitated Colby and other officials.

There are secrets that need protection. The wholesale publication of agents' names, for example, seems to me hard to justify — and likely to be a wrecking operation.

So Colby has a point when he says, as he often has said, that his agency cannot conceal everything any longer but should be able to protect a narrow class of true secrets. The trouble is that what the government tries to conceal is not narrow or logical.

Colby himself, not long ago, tried to censor from a book the fact that his predecessor, Richard Helms, mispronounced the word Malagasy at a National Security Council meeting. He tried also to suppress publication of details of Tom Charles Houston's illegal domestic security plan after the whole plan had been printed in the New York Times. And of course the CIA did unlawful acts for years under the cloak of secrecy.

Presidents have also carried out through the CIA operations so large, and so political in nature, that they could never remain secret and should not. The Nixon administration's attempt to upset the constitutional processes of Chile was a past example; a current one is the intervention in Angola. Such operations are undertaken in secret for the very reason that, if they were submitted to the public scrutiny our system requires, Congress and the public would reject them.

The Welch case will be used by Colby to lobby for secrecy legislation that he has long sought. It would allow the government to get injunctions against publication — by newspapers or anyone else of secrets disclosed by present or former intelligence employees. The way would also be open to bring reporters before grand juries and demand that they name any such sources. And the definition of "secrets" would remain quite vague.

In the Pentagon Papers case, Justice Potter Stewart of the Supreme Court warned that the government was hurting its own cause by trying to sweep too much under the label secret. "When everything is classified," he said, "then nothing is classified . . . The hallmark of a truly effective internal security system would be the maximum possible disclosure, recognizing that secrecy can best be preserved only when credibility is truly maintained."

Much unhappy experience cautions against letting the emotions of the Welch murder lead us to careless legitimizing of secrecy. And there is a broader danger.

President Ford and his colleagues, judging by their recent comments, hope to prevent any thoroughgoing reform of the CIA. They will use the Welch case to that end, in particular to resist limits on covert operations and to reduce congressional scrutiny. If they succeed, the ironic result would be to preserve the very faults of structure and performance that have hurt an agency with much good on its record.

Year for Clean Cultural Break

By STANLEY REYNOLDS
Manchester Guardian

New Year's Resolution: I will never ever watch another Humphrey Bogar movie. I will never say the name Humphrey Bogart again. If anyone says the name Humphrey Bogart to me I shall get up and finally walk out of the room.

The New Year will also find me screaming and possibly going into shock if anyone starts talking to me about F. Scott Fitzgerald. Why didn't he call himself Francis anyway? I am finally also finished with his boring wife Zelda. What kind of a name is Zelda anyway? In 1976 you will also not hear the name Jack Kerouac passing from these lips. If I hear the name Kerouac again I will scream. What kind of a name is Kerouac anyway?

This is going to be the year of the clean cultural break. I do not want to see the Maltese Falcon ever again. I have spent a great part of my life watching the Maltese Falcon and listening to all that explaining they are always doing in it. And that was just once too much the other night. I know all about how great a movie it is but life is too short and I cannot spare the time to see it another two dozen times. I will never again repeat that rhythm of Bogart's to Elisha Cook Junior — you know the one about the cheaper the gunsel the gawdier the patter — who is Elisha Cook Senior by the way? And I really do not want to know, so don't anybody write in.

Have you ever noticed the way they just stand there in those old movies with hats on with nothing actually moving but their mouth? Have you ever heard so much talk in your life as we heard the other night when Bogart started explaining all the ramifications of who was doing what to whom.

We cannot go on like this. We have got to stop watching Bogey and we have got to forget poor Scott and Zelda. Poor Scott! He was making $1,000 a week out there in Hollywood with his lousy tortured soul. That's some kind of torture isn't it?

Scott and Zelda are going in 1976. And wasn't the best scene in that TV film with his boring wife the one when the big movie mogul chewed him out and told him he couldn't have two people sitting in a car just talking for half an hour because the camera needed something to look at and the folks who bought the ticket might tend to get bored. I mean, we were supposed to be thinking about poor tortured Scott having to work for a Hollywood slob.

But I didn't think that. Suddenly I was all for the movie producer. I also knew what picture Scott was working on. He was writing a Yank at Oxford. I mean, what is there to get so tortured about. Actually Fitzgerald's trouble was that he drank too much and always had it too easy.

And 1976 is also putting an end to Papa Hemingway. I do not want to know about young Ernest and Scott in Paris. I mean that was a long time ago. We cannot keep on going on thinking about Scott and young Hemingway and all that expatriate business in Paris because pretty soon we are going to start believing we were there too and we weren't. But I bet if we were there with Scott and Zelda and Ernest they wouldn't even buy us a drink.

I am also fed up to the teeth with Dorothy Parker and all that old-fashioned New Yorker magazine stuff. We weren't at the Algonquin round table and I'll bet if we were they wouldn't let us in. I'm erasing the New Yorker wits from my cultural memory in 1976.

I tell you something else I'm going to do. I am definitely ending the Spanish Civil War in 1976. I wasn't there just like I wasn't in Paris. It's just that we have heard so much about it you begin to feel as if you were in the international brigade defending Madrid. In 1976 I am going to stop refusing to go to Fascist Franco Spain on my holidays — not that I could afford to go anyway.

Also 1976 will find me not watching Cary Cooper being so brilliantly understated. If Frank Capra lived next door I would go out and break his window. And isn't Gary Cooper actually just sort of wooden and stupid looking?

He goes in '76 along with Bogey, Scott, Zelda, Papa and the Spanish Civil War. I am making a resolution to stop lying about my age in '76, pretending that I was born yesterday and have no idea about anything that happened before last Tuesday.

New Secrets Desperately Needed

RUSSELL BAKER

President Ford and Professor Kissinger are very cross. Their secrets keep going public. They fear it will be the ruin of America. How can a great democracy hope to survive if people know what the government is doing?

Not long ago they concocted what looked like the perfect secret. There was a secret meeting at a secret Washington location — naturally, all this is well-known — and the president told Kissinger that the secrets supply was so low that democracy might expire at any instant unless something ingenious was done.

With the brilliance for which he is famous, Kissinger immediately invented Angola and outlined a plan to save it from Communism by secretly sending big bundles of money and plenty of bullets.

After assuring himself that Angola was not secretly New York City, the president approved the new secret. It looked absolutely leak-proof. How could the public possibly learn of sending bullets and dollars to a country nobody had ever heard of?

The following week the entire secret was in all the papers. Journalists even discovered a primitive piece of land in southwestern Africa which they said was Angola.

Both Ford and Kissinger were infuriated. If there really was an Angola why did they have to learn it from the press? Did the press now have secrets that were more exciting than the government's secrets? Here was a truly insolent challenge to government authority.

"We've got to fight back," the president secretly told Kissinger, "before the public knows more secrets than we do." He ordered Kissinger to invent another country so they could secretly ship it some Treasury goodies to stop Communism.

Kissinger had an even more brilliant idea. He said they should secretly send $6 million in cash to Italian politicians willing to use it to fight Communism.

"Six million dollars to Italian politicians!" wept the president. "We might just as well throw it away."

"Not entirely," said Kissinger. "Assuming that Italian politicians can be trusted as far as American politicians, we can trust them to spend only $5.5 million on improving their standard of living. This still leaves us a half-million dollars worth of Italian politician for our investment."

The president said the consequences would be bad if the secret were leaked, but Kissinger pointed out that the chances of a leak were negligible. "No newspaperman would expect any government in its right mind to give $6 million to Italian politicians, so they won't be looking for it," he reasoned. "Even if they printed it, who would believe it?"

The president was slow to accept Kissinger's reasoning. "With the things we've been doing lately, Henry," he said, "they'll believe anything."

And what about the damage that would befall those stalwart anti-Communist Italian politicians if the secret were leaked in Italy?

"Italy is not the United States," Kissinger observed. "Italians will be scandalized only if they learn one of their politicians has refused to take the money."

Moreover, he argued, it might have a felicitous side effect on Italian life. Mafia men might be tempted to give up the rigors of kidnapping once they learned that they could get huge sums of cash from the U.S. government simply by going into politics.

In the end, the secret plan was secretly adopted, and music was heard all over Italy wherever Italian politicians' wives had been telling Italian politicians there wasn't enough money for a new Maserati this year.

Almost immediately, of course, the secret appeared in the press. Its publication had none of the terrible results the president had feared. As Kissinger had forecast, nobody believed anybody in Washington was really dumb enough to pass out $6 million in cash to Italian politicians.

In Italy not an eyebrow was raised in horror, since no Italian politician was accused of having turned down the boodle.

Only in Washington was there anger and anguish. The president and the professor had had a secret and seen it exposed to the public.

It ruined half the pleasure of being president and secretary of state. Where was the fun in being the only two men in America who knew what was really going on if, tomorrow morning, everybody else in the country would know, too?

Worse! Where was the grandeur in having a secret that, once exposed, struck everybody as too absurd to matter?

President Ford and Professor Kissinger are very cross. They desperately need new secrets. Public suggestions for improbable countries to throw money away in should be addressed to either the White House or the State Department, in envelopes marked "Confidential."

New Wrinkle in Potato Chips

TORONTO (CP) — A new element has altered the Canadian potato chips business with the introdution of a United Sates product that costs more and comes in cans shaped like tennis ball containers.

Pringle's Newfangled Potato Chips, manufactured by Procter and Gamble Corp. of the U.S., the big soap and detergent firm, has been winning customers in the Canadian market.

"Pringle's are becoming a very big item," said a spokesman for National Grocers Co. Ltd., the Toronto wholesaler that imports the chips from the U.S. "We're selling a raft of them."

"They cost more than regular potato chips," the spokesman said. "But they're good value because there's no breakage and each chip is a uniform size."

At $1.39 to $1.49 for nine ounces. Pringle's are more expensive than the regular chips, which cost about 89 cents for eight ounces.

In the U.S., Pringle's are estimated to have captured eight to 10 per cent of the market. However, the product is not yet well established in Canada.

The only Canadian-made rival to Pringle's is a product called Munchos, produced by Frito-Lay Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Pepsi-Cola Canada Ltd. Munchos are packed in cellophane bags rather than cans and, like Pringle's, are of uniform size.

Pringle's are made from potatoes that are cooked, mashed and dehydrated. Added to this is water, chemical preservatives, sugar, Vitamin C and salt, all of which is cut into molds and fried.

Each chip is stacked in an airtight, moisture-proof and crush-proof container, packaged in pairs and shipped to warehouse locations.

Pringle's claims that because of the manufacturing process and packaging, its product stays fresh on the shelves for a year, compared to an estimated three months for most potato chips.

But this claim is challenged by Ted Tombs, product manager for Munchos.

"If they sit around in a store's warehouse for a few weeks, they start to get stale," Tombs said. "But our chips are shipped to the stores only, and not to the warehouse."

As to the ordinary potato chip, even its manufacturers admit it is not a perfect product.

Each bag contains some broken chips, some burned, some with green spots, and inevitably lots of crumbs at the bottom. To some, this is part of the charm of the ordinary chip, to others a drawback.

Demand for potato chips increased considerably in the late 1960s, when the flavored potato chip went on the market, with tastes like salt and vinegar, hot dog, sweet and sour, dill pickle and ketchup.

Statistics indicate that each Canadian now munches his way through 6½ pounds of potato chips a year.

Beirut's Central 'Banker' Has Machine-Gun Guards

BEIRUT (AP) — War-torn Lebanon's "central bank" is a 60-year-old money changer who deals in bales of bank notes and cheques from a Beirut town house guarded by hired gunmen.

Beirut's banks have been shut for six weeks by the fierce street fighting. Wealthy Lebanese needing foreign currency to flee the country, businessmen who continue to pay their employees and traders who need cash or foreign exchange for deals must cash their cheques or exchange their pounds with money changers.

Several dozen dealers work the streets of the Hamra shopping district. Half a dozen big dealers — including two Armenians, a Jew, and a Palestinian — handle company deals and other large amounts. The dealers' dealer is Mahmoud Shakarji, who fled from his native Iraq when the 1958 revolution overthrew the monarchy. He sets the rates of exchange each day.

"He is the biggest of us all, bigger than most banks — in fact he is now the 'central bank'," said one money changer who calls Shakarji each day to get the exchange rates.

A teletype machine brings the latest financial news from the world's money centres to Shakarji's tree-shaded villa on Beirut's fashionable Madame Curie Street. Several tough guards with submachine-guns patrol the villa and its grounds.

Most of the cheques changing hands end up with Shakarji, who apparently has access to an almost bottomless supply of hard cash in almost any currency.

"If you need 10 million Turkish pounds, Kuwaiti dinars, dollars, gold or whatever, he'll get it for you," said one

AIB NEEDS STRESSED

SASKATOON (CP) — Refusal of any province to co-operate with federal wage and price guidelines will have serious implications for the federal government's anti-inflation program, Robert Johnstone, executive director of the Anti-Inflation Board, said Tuesday.

Johnstone told a meeting of Saskatoon businessmen that he expects all provinces, except possibly Quebec, will sign agreements vesting the federal Anti-Inflation Board with authority to control wages and prices of provincial departments.

He told businessmen to look beyond the effect of guidelines on their individual businesses and view them as part of a balanced package of restraint.

"In the past, individuals and economic groups tried to press their claims largely at the expense of others," Johnstone said.

"The guidelines are designed to alter the situation by reducing the uncertainty, reducing the apparent need to press our own claims in order to protect ourselves and gradually reducing the rate of inflation."

Death on March as Masses Shifted

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (NYT) — Hundreds of thousands of people are being moved from one part of Cambodia to another, frequently at gunpoint, according to Western intelligence sources and interviews here with refugees, who escaped from convoys.

By train, truck, oxcart and on foot, peasants are being shifted into the more sparsely populated northwestern area of the country, primarily Battambang province.

According to refugee accounts, many died on the rigorous journeys either of disease or simply weakness and the hardships of the journey, the purpose of which is still not known for sure.

Among the explanations advanced by those who took part — and they were never told the reason by Cambodian officials — were the greater availability of vacant land in the new areas, the need for workers to develop these regions and the desire to break up any possible anti-government groupings that might be forming.

The migration began in late October or early November and is continuing, according to refugees who are arriving daily at the refugee camp here in Aranyaprathet and in others along the Cambodian-Thai frontier.

Chou Tri, 33, arrived Jan. 6, in the month before he left his home in Phnom Srok to make the journey to the border, he said about 65,000 families had arrived in the region around the town.

Many, he said, were seriously ill when they arrived. He said he had seen 600 die in the first month after their arrival and before his departure.

Those who were able-bodied, he said, were immediately sent to work harvesting the rice crop, which he described as one of the best in years, or digging irrigation ditches and building earthworks or clearing land.

There is still some question as to what these huge shifts in population mean in terms of the control the Communist government has managed to establish over Cambodia.

"There is no question they are becoming increasingly better organized," said one western diplomat.

"These movements show excellent co-ordination, moving the excess population of the country precisely to where they are most needed, where they are most economically effective."

State Department Denies It Knew Diplomat's Killer

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The state department denied vehemently Tuesday that it knew the identity of those who assassinated U.S. Ambassador Rodger Davies in Nicosia in 1974, or that it was lax in investigating the killing.

Department spokesman John Trattner said that Washington has pursued the investigation "consistently and vigorously" and that State Secretary Henry Kissinger had intervened following the August, 1974 incident.

He added: "The government of Cyprus is aware that we are not satisfied with its actions to date."

The Washington Post said U.S. intelligence officials had learned the identity of the killers within an hour after Davies was shot and that the killers now are members of the Cyprus security forces.

The Post, quoting intelligence sources, said that shortly after the murder, hard information on the identity of the killers was relayed to Washington and to Nicosia.

The Post also said the assassination was recorded on American Broadcasting Company (ABC) news film which was never shown publicly.

Trattner said Tuesday that after the killing, which occurred during an anti-American protest, the Cypriot government assured Washington it would investigate the killing vigorously.

"... the U.S. government does not know the identity of the person or persons who killed Ambassador Davies," Trattner said, adding "television news films and other evidence" have been provided to the Cyprus authorities to help identify "members of the mob" firing at the American embassy.

Trattner said that "from the evidence available to us it has not been possible to determine who fired that shot that killed Ambassador Davies.

"Any implication that the U.S. government has been lax in its efforts to bring the killer to justice is an unwarranted and reprehensible distortion of the facts ..."

Mediator For Kelowna

A mediator was appointed by the provincial government Tuesday into the four-month-old dispute between the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the city of Kelowna.

Labor Minister Allan Williams met both sides in the dispute for about three hours Tuesday and announced after a mediator would be chosen from the labor department.

A department observer had been involved earlier in negotiations. The strike started in September over the issue of job evaluation.

The union is demanding the city honor its commitment to adhere to the findings of a job evaluation study conducted by the city in 1974 but civic officials claim many of the rates established in the study were erroneous.

ISSUE OF
NON-CALLABLE
GOVERNMENT OF CANADA BONDS
DATED FEBRUARY 1, 1976

Bank of Canada is authorized by the Minister of Finance to receive subscriptions for a loan to be issued for cash as follows:

2 year 10½ month 8¼% bonds due December 15, 1978
Issue price: 100.35% yielding about 8.35% to maturity
Interest payable June 15 and December 15
Four and one half months' interest payable June 15, 1976
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

5 year 8¼% bonds due February 1, 1981
Issue price: 100.00% yielding about 8.50% to maturity
Interest payable August 1 and February 1
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

19 year 8 month 10% bonds due October 1, 1995
Issue price: 101.00% yielding about 9.88% to maturity
Interest payable April 1 and October 1
Two months' interest payable April 1, 1976
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $275 million of the new bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $150 million of Government of Canada 9¼% bonds maturing February 1, 1976 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 8¼% bonds due December 15, 1978 are an addition to $150 million of 8¼% bonds due December 15, 1978 and dated December 15, 1975. The new 10% bonds due October 1, 1995 are an addition to $325 million of 10% bonds due October 1, 1995, dated October 1, 1975 and December 15, 1975 and will be eligible for purchase by the Purchase Fund created October 1, 1975.

The new bonds will be dated February 1, 1976 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on February 2, 1976 (without payment of accrued interest) and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

Communists Admit Links

LISBON (Reuter)—The Portuguese Communist party said today it had contact with soldiers who staged an unsuccessful coup on Nov. 25 — but not with radical leftists alleged to have been involved in planning the uprising.

The party said in a statement that its members' contact with the rebel troops had dated from before Nov. 25 and had been completely normal.

It was replying to a report published Tuesday by a military commission of inquiry, which accused it of playing an important role in the revolt.

The Conservative Democrat party issued a communique calling for moral, political and legal punishment for the Communists and asking whether they should be allowed to remain in the coalition government.

Maj. Otelo Faraiva de Carvalho, leader of the 1974 coup which overthrew Portugal's right-wing dictatorship, was in prison today for his alleged part in the Nov. 25 revolt.

Carvalho was detained at his home late Monday night after the commission of inquiry reported that he had been responsible for distributing arms to rebel troops.

A high command spokesman said he was being held in a jail at Santarne, 50 miles north of the capital and that he will eventually go on trial.

In a related development, the radical left has ended its inactivity following the coup attempt and resumed low-key agitation against the government's austerity program, which entails a wage freeze and has led to drastic increases in food prices.

It has called a demonstration for tonight in Lisbon in support of workers' control of industry and a 40-hour week.

The rally has been banned by the civil governor of Lisbon, raising the prospect of a clash with security forces. In the new atmosphere of law and order since Nov. 25, the government has not hesitated to use the paramilitary Republican Guard, the scourge of leftists under the old right-wing dictatorship.

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE TO LOUNGE IN STYLE

An unusual week-long auction will start Friday at McPherson Playhouse.

On the block will be garments which have become a symbol of the suavely sophisticated heroes of Noel Coward comedies—elegant dressing gowns.

If you've ever had fantasies about reclining in a salon a la Coward, here's your opportunity.

Bastion Theatre is offering for auction all four of the dressing gowns worn by leading character Garry Essedine in its production (opening Friday) of Coward's Present Laughter.

Each of the gowns is finely constructed and elegantly styled. There is a purple paisley, a soft orange and black, a mauve and black, and a long caftan.

These may be bid for at the special production booth in the McPherson upper foyer. Written bids will be accepted throughout the run of the production which ends Jan. 31.

N-Bid Turned Down

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, winding up a tour of Israel and other Middle East countries, said Tuesday night he has turned down an Egyptian request for a Canadian nuclear reactor.

MacEachen, who flies to Paris today, told a news conference that Israel has not requested a nuclear reactor, "but the Egyptians did ask for one and I told them Canada was not in a position to supply one."

The minister called on "the parties directly concerned to settle the Middle East conflict."

In reply to a question, he said Canada "had never maintained that the Palestine Liberation Organization was the sole representative of the Palestinian people. The question of how the Palestinian entity should look is not for us to say but one of the problems the parties involved should decide."

GLASS RAISED, Garry Essendine (Kenneth Dight) salutes the two important women in his life, wife Liz, wearing hat (Irena Mayeska), and his secretary, Monica (Maggie Askey).

Some Sunlight Coming Courtesy Noel Coward

If you think this dull, dark and wet postlude to the Christmas season is the ultimate in zilch, cheer up. It could be worse.

Something bright is about to nip over the horizon. Not the sun, no. It's Noel Coward.

In the person of one of his later comedies — Present Laughter — Sir Noel is being brought to McPherson Playhouse by Edwin Stephenson for Bastion Theatre Company.

It opens Friday and will run the usual week's course, ending Jan. 31, with matinees Jan. 25 and 31 at 2:30 p.m. There will be no performance Monday, Jan. 26.

The play is vintage Coward, concerned with a somewhat aging matinee idol, Garry Essendine (played by Kenneth Dight), his nice sensible wife, Liz (played by Irena Mayeska), and his down-to-earth secretary, Monica (Maggie Askey).

The production is designed by Ed Kotanen whose work was seen last season in The Fourposter and The Fantasticks.

Digh brings the finest English training to is role as Essendine. A graduate of Bristol Old Vic, and later a member of that company, he has acted with most of the major English repertory theatres.

Since coming to Canada in 1965, he has quickly become established with numerous appearances at most of the country's regional theatres.

Seen last season as Nora in Bastion's production of A Doll's House, Mayeska has recently returned from an extended study of theatre in Poland, done under a Canada Council grant.

Askey was named Actress of the Year in Canada in 1974 and has recently scored another critical triumph with her performance as Hecuba in Simon Fraser University's production of The Trojan Women.

Other members of the Coward cast are Margaret Bard, John Heath, Gil Osborne, Stuart Kent, Ramona McBean, Ian McIntyre and Andrew Gillies.

Witch Doctors Backed

GENEVA (UPI) — Witch doctors and other traditional healers play a crucial role in caring for the sick in poor countries and should get more encouragement from the medical profession, the World Health Organization said today.

WHO said such healers not only are able to help cure certain physical ailments but are also skilled in psychotherapy and "patient management."

"Official health services, on the whole, have been reluctant to recognize and evaluate the contribution traditional healers are making to the physical, and particularly the psychological, welfare of populations and have tended to disparage rather than cooperate with the traditional system," WHO said in a report to its executive board.

"Health professions have much to learn from traditional healers regarding their practice of psychotherapy, their approach to sickness and patient management, and the probity and humility with which they look upon their role in the community," the report said.

It urged that such healers, who form the basic core of primary health workers for about 90 per cent of the rural populations in developing countries, be given supplementary health training, including an elementary knowledge of the body, notions in hygiene, nutrition and mother and child care.

There are about 400,000 traditional healers in India, and in Africa there are herbalists, bone setters, traditional psychiatrists, specialists such as snake and scorpion bite experts, and "fetish priests and priestesses and witch doctors who are essentially spiritual healers and exorcists."

In South America there are herbalists with a good knowledge of herbal remedies, and priestesses who also employ herbs, incantations and exorcism to expel evil spirits.

"The village midwife or traditional birth attendant undertakes some prenatal care and delivers 60 to 90 per cent of the babies in certain developing countries," the report said.

One-Day Teacher Walkout

MONTREAL (CP) — Frustrated by the lack of a complete contract offer at the negotiating table, about 400 English Protestant teachers held a one-day work stoppage Tuesday, closing 15 elementary and secondary schools and affecting about 9,000 students.

Doug McCall, president of the 840-member Lakeshore Teachers Association, said the pressure tactics might continue if no salary offer is presented at the negotiation session today.

Association president Jack Johnson said he expected a salary offer similar to the 26.5-per-cent first-year increase already offered to the Quebec Teachers Federation and the 5,400-member Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers, which is bargaining separately.

Quebec teachers earn annual salaries of $11,606 after 10 years, while their Ottawa counterparts with 10 years experience earn $19,710.

The teachers are asking for a 43.8-per-cent salary increase in a one-year contract, the same demand as the rest of the common front.

Mounties Play Newsmen?

OTTAWA (CP) — Le Droit says two RCMP officers posed as Canadian Press reporters to obtain information from residents of the Ottawa Valley involved in union organizations and citizens' groups.

The article, entitled All Rights Reserved, said Phil Gornon, a spokesman for striking workers at the E. B. Eddy Co. of Hull, was approached for an nterview last November by two men who said they were freelance journalists from the Canadian Press wire service. One of the men introduced himself as Jean Desrosiers.

The national news-gathering agency said it does not employ freelance writers and that it has never had an employee named eJan Desrosiers.

The newspaper says it learned a person named Desrosiers was registered at a local hotel on the day of the interview, but had given a false address and false occupation.

Le Droit says the RCMP office in Ottawa has an officer named Jean Desrosiers, who is a member of a security squad formed for the summer Olympics in Montreal.

The officer told a Le Droit reporter he was interested in Gornon's activities, but denied having assumed the identity of a Canadian Press reporter to get information.

Tory Rift Over Candidate Veto

MAZANKOWSKI
. . . breaks with committee

OTTAWA (CP) — The weekend purge of Olympic contractor Joseph Zappia and Moncton MP Leonard Jones from the Progressive Conservative leadership campaign is causing dissent within the upper ranks of the party.

Alberta MP Don Mazankowski, deputy chairman of the Feb. 19-22 convention, broke with his colleagues on the influential convention committee Tuesday and said both men should get another chance in the race to succeed Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield.

The 32-member executive body has effective power to blackball candidates it does not like, Mazankowski said in an interview.

Ontario MP Bill Jarvis, chairman of a three-member candidate liaison committee which reports to the executive group, defended the executive's decision to banish Zappia and Jones from the campaign.

"I guess it's quite right to call us elitists," Jarvis said in an interview. "We are judge and jury, but somebody has to bite the bullet once in a while and take on this job."

The two MPs were commenting on a closed weekend meeting here of the convention committee which certified 11 candidates in the leadership campaign, rejected Zappia because of irregularities in his nomination papers and endorsed the report of a three-man investigating team which said Jones did not even qualify as a member of the party.

Mazankowski said he had serious doubts about the whole candidate selection procedure because it gives the convention committee, "the party hierarchy," broad powers to say yes or no to prospective candidates.

If there is doubt about an individual candidate his or her name should be allowed to stand so the 2,600 voting delegates at the leadership convention here can make the final decision, Mazankowski said.

Jarvis disagreed, saying there had to be a balance between grassroots democracy and the need for high officials to protect the best interests of the party.

Jarvis said the committee, which normally functions as the national executive of the party, has terribly broad powers over prospective candidates.

"There is no strong definition of what is in the party's interests and what is not" when candidates are certified for the leadership, he said.

Under convention rules candidates must go through a two-step process to have their names included on ballots.

Jarvis said Jones flunked the first test beecause he was not officially endorsed by the Moncton riding association.

Zappia was rejected because the committee found that some persons who signed his nomination papers also signed for candidate Brian Mulroney, a Montreal lawyer.

"If Zappia had qualified before our committee, technically the convention committee could have rejected him if, in its judgment, his candidacy was not in the best interests of the party," Jarvis said.

He said this is part of the second step in the process. The executive committee must make a decision on the over-all acceptability of a candidate and can reject a candidate even if he or she meets all of the basic nomination requirements.

Both Zappia and Jones said Monday they will stay unofficially in the campaign and fight the convention committee decision.

Hellyer Would Woo Caouette

WINNIPEG (CP) — Paul Hellyer said Tuesday that if he is chosen leader of the Progressive Conservative party, he will try to enlist the support of Social Credit leader Real Caouette.

"The most effective way to win Quebec and the country in the next election is to persuade Mr. Caouette to join the party. I will try to achieve that," Hellyer said.

Speaking at a Winnipeg Press Club bearpit session, Hellyer said bringing Social Credit MPs into the Conservative ranks would give the Tories a total of 15 MPs in Quebec.

"You enter an election with 15 MPs or so, and come out with 25 to 30," he said.

Hellyer, a former defence minister in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet who later joined the Conservative party, said the Conservatives' weakness in Quebec was the main reason they lost the 1974 general election.

Hellyer also said he is "unequivocally opposed" to strikes in essential services. He said this position applied to the threat of a Winnipeg bus driver's strike. The strike is set for next Monday morning.

RETURN TO LOFFMARK ERA FEARED

McClelland Meeting 'Disaster'

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The first meeting between Health Minister Bob McClelland and regional hospital planners was a "disaster," the chairman of the Capital region's hospital board said today.

Art Young said a delegation from the hospital and health planning commission reviewed plans and problems with the new minister Tuesday and got "a definitely negative attitude" on almost every issue.

"We went to see him with high hopes and came away deflated," said the usually placid Young. "We expected an enthusiastic and eager attitude from a new minister and got a definitely negative attitude.

"It would appear the new government has no policy, no money and no understanding of the local situation.

"It gave me the impression that we could be back in the Loffmark (former Socred health minister) era—when local requirements, needs and recommendations were completely ignored by the bureaucrats."

The region's delegation included besides Young, Robert Wallace, the commission chairman; John Clark, the region's director of hospital planning; Dennis Young, the region's executive director and Ken Robinson, land commissioner for the region.

McClelland had deputies Jim Mainguy, Bill Lyle and John Glenwright on hand.

The region's representatives presented eight points which they asked speedy provincial action on, including:

—a phased $3 million replacements program for outdated radiology equipment at Victoria General and Royal Jubilee Hospitals, awaiting government approval for three months.

—approval of future bed allocations for the two major hospitals, already agreed to by representatives from hospitals and doctors.

—authority for functional planning at both hospitals for extensive renovations and expansion, first requested last October.

—agreement on new planning ratios for extended care beds to meet a growing shortage.

—authority for capital spending on a total of 78 projects costing almost $1 million, some of which were submitted to the province for approval last May. One of these is $297,000 for a rebuilding of Jubilee's emergency department.

—a decision on how the region can finance $50 million worth of hospital development in the next five years. Anticipated capital spending this year of over $22 million will exhaust borrowing approved in a referendum four years ago.

The commission has also been pressing the provincial government for approval to buy a $2.5 million site at Douglas and McKenzie for a new acute care hospital. Young said it got no commitment from McClelland Tuesday.

In a letter presented to the minister Wallace said the search for a suitable property began in 1969, one proposal fizzled a year later and local agreement on the continuing need was finally achieved in 1974.

Eight years after recognizing that Victoria General must be replaced for the most part with a new hospital, said Wallace, "progress can be characterized as being fruitless."

Young said today the factor which disturbed him most at Tuesday's meeting was the implication that the regional hospital and health planning commission, formed a year ago, should possibly be abandoned.

"As far as I'm concerned the commission has been the one definite plus in the local hospital field in the past few years," he said.

The commission includes four regional directors, representatives from hospitals and district residents. In his annual report to the commission earlier this month Clark listed 17 projects achieved in its first year.

But he also warned that despite a year of harmonious effort, "not one hole has been dug, not one brick mortared to another, nor one nail driven, and that physical evidence of progress remains singularly absent."

City Parks Vandalism Doubled

Vandalism in Victoria's parks system almost doubled last year, and among the worst-hit victims were small parks, playing fields and boulevards.

A report prepared by parks administrator Cliff Bate says total damage caused amounted to more than $5,000, compared with $2,833 in 1974.

The vandals' prime targets were four neighborhood parks — Topaz, Stevenson, Hollywood and Macdonald — where damage totalled $2,169.

A demolished swing in Stevenson Park cost $500 to replace, and in Topaz Park the wrecking spree included a door ripped off a dressing room and mirrors, light tubes and other fixtures smashed.

Equally vulnerable were boulevards and decorative areas in downtown Victoria, with damage totalling $2,115.

Someone cut down a cluster of thorn trees on untaxed road allowance at Alston and Langford, and someone else methodically broke 70 brass sprinkler nipples on the Blanshard median, which cost $300 to replace.

Twelve hanging baskets disappeared from lamp posts.

But it wasn't all bad news in Bate's report. Total damage caused to Beacon Hill Park in 1975 was only $524.

Your Chance To Pioneer

A rare opportunity for Victorians to work at a number of pioneer activities is being offered at the Provincial Museum until May 16.

Entitled The Labor of Our Hands, the museum program which began this week features a working history situation in which instruction is given in old-time skills.

Some of the program's offerings which typify the lifestyle of early settlers in Victoria include the building of a Hudson's Bay-style log cabin, spinning wool, quilting, making rough furniture and period dress-making.

Programs will be offered on Sunday afternoons and weekday evenings. Families are asked to pick a day and time which will be free for every session in the three-week period.

'Polite' Letter, Then Court May Face Tardy Taxpayers

Victoria taxpayers who don't pay their property taxes on time may be taken to court, if a recommendation of city solicitor Jakob de Villiers is ensorsed by the finance committee and then approved by city council.

The proposal follows concern expressed by Mayor Mike Young in his inaugural address earlier this month, when he noted that uncollected taxes at the end of 1975 totalled nearly $1 million — almost double the 1974 figure.

Young said more than half the total of outstanding taxes was owed by 22 major corporations in the apartment housing and hotel industries.

"Whether this is a reflection of their inability to pay or is simply a device being used by these corporations to finance their current developments remains to be seen," the mayor said.

Noting the trend in recent years, as the cost of borrowing has increased, city officials have expressed the view that the firms concerned are simply using the city as a relatively cheap source of financing.

When taxes aren't paid by the due date they become, in effect, a "loan" from the city to the taxpayer concerned. Yet the penalty or interest rate payable is only 10 per cent in the first year and eight per cent in the second — far lower than that available through conventional financing institutions.

"It's relatively cheap financing for them," says city comptroller Mason Sheldrick. "We assume they find it advantageous to use these funds (outstanding taxes) to finance their enterprises, construction jobs, etc."

The city solicitor's recommendation, to be considered by the finance committee on Thursday, is that the city initiate court action against all taxpayers whose arrears total more than $1,000.

De Villiers says in his report he would write a "polite" letter in each case warning that such action would be taken unless the arrears were settled within 10 days.

He expresses the view that most taxpayers would pay their taxes immediately they are sued. But even if the city were forced to "go all the way" with the court action, in most cases it would still be able to collect the money about two years sooner than under the present system of recovery through property tax sales.

Court actions for unpaid taxes were fairly common in B.C. until the depression years, De Villiers notes.

"Presumably, it then became uneconomic to sell properties for taxes, since in those days the amounts owing on taxes often exceeded the market value of the land. Consequently the municipalities repossessed these lands.

"Under current economic conditions the situation is, of course, very different."

Why Keep Counting?

Merchants in the 400 and 500-block Craigflower have been broken into so many times this past year one store owner has given up counting.

The culprits, they say, are juveniles.

It's been a perennial problem in Vic West. Up to now the businessmen have reluctantly taken their lumps.

But Fred Jacoff, owner of Uncle Fred's Chicken, said today he will ask the Police Board for increased patrols.

At present there are three patrol cars covering the city on the night beat with only one assigned to Vic West.

A police spokesman agreed that wasn't enough. "But what can you do . . . it's really a manpower problem."

Although Gary Small, owner of Vic West Bakery, would welcome anything to curb the break-in rate (his store was broken into eight times last year) he's skeptical increased patrols would succeed without better co-operation from the courts.

"Unless the courts start taking juveniles seriously," he said. "What can anyone do?"

Small said there is a growing frustration among the merchants.

"What's going to happen is someone is going to catch some of these kids in his store and start knocking in a few heads.

"But that probably wouldn't solve anything . . . the kids will just come back and throw a rock through your window."

A spokesman for the Victoria city juvenile squad said a number of arrests have been made but the courts are generally so lenient the entire matter becomes a joke.

The difficulty is, Small said, that the juveniles are on the street the day after they're arrested.

"The courts seem to treat the break-ins as a misdemeanor."

He said he has sought restitution but so far has failed to collect a penny.

$15,000 PAID INJURED MAN

Three Vancouver Island men were among 24 in the province who received awards totalling $75,369 under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act during December.

One of the three, a 36-year-old man was awarded the maximum lump sum award — $15,000. He suffered extensive bone fractures and was blinded in his right eye while coming to the aid of an unknown man who was being attacked by two men on a Vancouver Street.

The second, a 41-year-old man, received $5,305 for injuries received when he was attacked by four youths as he was leaving a beer parlor. The award covers loss of income he incurred during his hospitalization and convalescence.

And the third, a 21-year-old man, was awarded $4,986 for injuries received when a man doused him with a pail of boilding water.

Names and details of the cases are not released by the Workers' Compensation Board which adjudicates all applications for compensation for injuries resulting from criminal acts.

In addition to the lump sum awards, pensions amounting to $919 a month were awarded to three other B.C. men who received permanent disabilities.

A 24-year-old Interior man who was viciously attacked by a gun-wielding youth, resulting in blindness in both eyes was awarded a lifetime pension of $346 a month plus a lump sum payment of $7,500 and $3,198 to cover medical expenses.

A 31-year-old Vancouver man received a $323 monthly pension and $7,500 settlement for an attack which left him with a cerebral concussion and loss of his normal speech function.

Mayor, Glazier Disagree On Development's Density

Two members of Victoria city council disagreed Tuesday on whether a proposed housing development should have high or moderate density, and also whether the city itself should take any part in the planning process.

The site in question is a 4.5-acre tract of hilly land, a mixture of rock and trees, in the Mount Stephen-Cedar Hill area south of Hillside Avenue.

Housing committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier argued that the provincially-owned property lends itself to a reasonably high density of around 80 units, but Mayor Mike Young said he would "vigorously oppose" any density beyond the 50-unit level already approved by council.

And while Glazier wanted the city to be represented on a four-member committee to draw up terms of reference for the appropriate use of the site, Young said he could see no reason why the city should become involved.

That role should be left to the owners, the provincial government, and to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said the mayor.

"I don't think we should involve ourselves any more than we do with a private developer," he commented. "I say absolutely no."

To Glazier, Young added: "If you want to tell me today that you want a higher density on that site, I would have to say that you have lost your marbles."

He reminded the alderman that the land was formerly owned by the city, which only sold it to the province for the low price of $190,000 — one dollar per square foot — on the condition that any housing development there would be a "low-density situation."

Glazier pointed out that even 60 units would be only about half the density permitted under the city's R3L zone for medium-density attached housing.

"I would like to see three clusters of buildings with around 80 units rather than the spreading of two-storey units over this site."

As for the city being involved in the steering committee, Glazier said this would be an opportunity to influence the final form of the development "so it comes out the way we want it."

The committee finally recommended that the matter be referred to the city's Advisory Planning Commission for recommendations.

Shelbourne Parking Ban Soon Extended to All Week

The parking ban on Shelbourne from Mondays to Fridays will be extended to every day of the week.

Saanich's public works committee decided Tuesday to recommend council take the action to unsnarl traffic problems on one of the busiest streets in the municipality.

Northbound traffic will not be able to stop between 4 and 6 p.m. and will be banned from parking from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Southbound traffic will be unable to stop between 7 and 9 a.m. and there will be no parking from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

About 40 residents of Viaduct Avenue were told $6,000 will be put in the 1976 budget to remove rock on the north side of the street and widen the street to about 20 feet.

Warning signs will also be posted near the crest of the hill where motorists are faced with a blind spot.

It was agreed that Kenneth Street be closed and a road built at the rear of properties accessing on to Douglas between Kenneth and Hess at a cost of $15,000.

The committee was told the provincial department of highways will pay the costs of land acquisiiton and relocation of driveways that now front on Douglas.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren was authorized to initiate $224,300 worth of work designed to improve Saanich's water distribution system. The work consists of laying mains on Viewmont and West Saanich, as well as at Royal Oak school.

Warren was also given permission to proceed with work designed to increase sewer capacity in the Gorge area, west of Harriet and north of Gorge Road.

Street Light Supporters Win

There's going to be a street light on White Rock Street even if most Ten-Mile Point residents prefer darkness.

Walter Reynolds and six other residents won their bid Tuesday to have Saanich's public works committee order a light, at a cost of $360, placed outside Reynolds' property at 4035 White Rock.

At the request of the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers Association, Saanich passed a resolution in May, 1974, stating street lighting will not be installed where residents are opposed. The CBRA said Ten-Mile Point residents did not want lighting.

Reynolds and his neighbors won their point on the grounds a light will cut down late-night car parties and attempted break-ins.

Sound Dream Snuffed, Lodge Hope Rekindled

Dreams have died for two young men.

And, just north of Ladysmith on one of the most enchanting pieces of land you could hope to find, once-bustling Yellow Point Lodge sits empty and alone, waiting to be reborn.

In a little cabin nearby, 83-year-old Gerry Hill lives with his wife Elizabeth and son Richard and remembers what it was like when he built the lodge just before the Second World War.

"It was opened before it was finished," he says with a grin. "I had customers stepping on my heels all the time. And we were always fully booked."

In those early days, you had to book almost a year ahead if you wanted to be one of the 80 who stayed at the lodge or in the cabins on the beach.

And year after year the same people would come back to Yellow Point to relax by the giant rock fireplace in the wood-beamed lounge, wander the trails through the trees that cover the 170 acres or swim and sail. Gerry Hill never had to advertise.

No wonder they came back.

This was no ordinary holiday place. It was a retreat, a resting place, one where you were not a stranger but "one of the family."

"In those days, guests paid $15 a week all found, with five meals a day," says Hill. "And I made more then than I can now."

"We always had low rates and things like fishing trips, water skiing and boating were all free.

"But then we were allowed to operate as we wanted. There were no wage guidelines and, although we were netting very little, we managed to get along by using students from all over the world who were glad to have the experience working here for a while.

"And there were no heavy taxes," Gerry adds with a wry smile. "When I bought the place, the land tax was $15 a year. That seems incredible but there was nothing here then. Now the tax is something like $10,000 a year and you just can't run the place like we used to, you can't cope with today's prices."

It was for partially this reason — and because Hill thought he had lost a little of his zest and felt the lodge should go to younger hands — that he decided to sell Yellow Point three years ago.

There were plenty of potential buyers but Hill wanted the beautiful forest left in its natural state. He didn't want it logged or turned into a subdivision.

And so he sold to Bill Snow and Brian Nisbet, two young ex-Toronto men who are partners in Timbre Sound Industries Ltd. a Vancouver recording studio. Snow, who lives in Vancouver, and Nisbet, now in Nanaimo, continued to run Yellow Point, although not too profitably, as a lodge for the last three years. But all the time they had a dream.

They, too, wanted to keep the forest in its natural state and to convert the lodge into a recording studio that would serve as a retreat for the big-money stars of the rock music world. They had plans to redesign the lounge with a control room at one end.

Snow and Nisbet liked to point to the great success enjoyed by the Caribou Recording Studio in Colorado, home base for the rock group Chicago where superstar Elton John has recorded three albums. That studio was built on an isolated ranch with luxurious facilities. It is booked, solid for the next two years and is reaping fantastic profits.

max low

And, said the pair, Yellow Point could be just like that.

They had hopes of stars like Alice Cooper, and groups like the Hudson Brothers and the Bachman Turner Overdrive coming off the concert circuit to unwind and record at Yellow Point.

But it wasn't to be.

In a bid to raise the cash needed to convert the lodge into a studio, Timbre Sound went public. But it didn't get the support.

"Going public caused us no end of problems," Nisbet said in Nanaimo recently. "People in this province are loath to accept anything other than your basic industries."

And so Timbre Sound has packed up and pulled out and has sold Yellow Point back to Gerry Hill. He has employed Bob and Jocelyn Pederson of Vancouver, a couple who used to stay at the lodge regularly a few years ago, to manage it and plans to reopen this summer.

When I popped up Tuesday for a chat with Hill and a glimpse of the lodge, it was shrouded in fog but still beautiful. And I bumped into young Gina Sperling of Prince George, who will be the new cook. She was having a look around, too, and was impressed.

Sharing the Timbre Sound people's disappointment is 15-year-old Richard Hill, who plays bass guitar in his own local group and, says his dad, "just lives for rock music."

Hill plans to run Yellow Point as a lodge again for a year "and see how it goes." And Nisbet says he and Snow haven't given up all hope. They want Hill to keep an eye on their Vancouver studio and, if it becomes more and more successful, they hope Gerry himself will build a sound studio in the lodge and then lease it back to them for a 15-year period.

Gerry smiles at that.

"But it's still a pinwheel deal, isn't it? I mean, they have to strike it first, don't they?

"Perhaps if they can find another John Elton or Elton John, whichever it is — then we'd consider it."

Scorpions: Problems With the League Office

The Dogwood Basketball Association is having fun and games again. This time it's broke. Of course, that's the Vancouver end of the league. Over here, sponsor Ian Scott-Moncrief of the Scorpions pays all the bills. And the club is solvent. But that doesn't matter apparently. Because now the Scorpions' players are being asked to bail out the Vancouver part of the operation.

A recent letter to Scorpions' players tells the sob story, and asks for money. Conveniently the letter wasn't sent to Scott-Moncrief or manager Bob Burrows of the Scorpions team. Why? Who knows, because it is addressed "to all members of the association."

As a matter of fact the Scorpions weren't even invited to the emergency meeting of the Dogwood League at which a decision to ask for funds from the players was made. Which was probably another oversight.

Then last weekend the Scorpions dropped a 93-92 decision to Burnaby Bullets. A post-game check of the scoresheet, however, disclosed that a free shot made by Don Burrows hadn't been credited to him. By that time it was too late to point up the discrepancy. But that's just another part of a sad story, which may get sadder.

Insofar as the league race for playoff positions is concerned, it is the general understanding here that the Scorpions will win first place regardless of what happens in the final two games of the season at Vancouver, but Scott-Moncrief isn't too certain. The Vancouver A's play the Caps in one game and Burnaby meets North Shore in the other. If both the A's and Burnaby win they would be tied with the Scorpions.

If this happens, Burnaby would automatically be relegated to third place because both Scorpions and the A's have a better won-lost record over the Bullets. That's the first tie breaker. But Scorpions and the A's would be even in wins against each other (2-2) and, according to Scott-Moncrief, Scorpions should be declared champions because of the next tie-breaker, points for and against each other on the season; and the Scorpions have a five-point bulge over the A's in this department.

But then he's not too sure, either, because of the history of the workings of the Dogwood League executive. "I've never seen anything like it," he said.

In other words Scott-Moncrief feels the executive may change things around to suit themselves and order a sudden-death playoff for first place.

He was extremely critical of the executive. "They just do what they want to shaft us," he declared. "We were never informed of the executive meeting Sunday. We were not told of the letter. I have demanded one, but haven't received it yet (that was Tuesday morning) and yet they sent it to our players."

The letter outlines the financial problems of the league and, in essence asks each senior A player to contribute an additional $20 and each junior player $10, to get the league out of the red and enable the playoffs to be financed.

Scott-Moncrief is annoyed (that's a mild word) that he was not consulted because he has paid all the Scorpion bills here. "I've spent $2,600 this year" he declared. "And it will cost me another $1,600 (less gate receipts) for the playoffs. "And they have the nerve to ask our players for money without asking or consulting us (management)."

Scott-Moncrief's game-by-game expenses work out to $253 a player for the season. "I could play a 20-game schedule in Seattle for $126 a man. That's how ridiculous it is."

Scott-Moncrief also decried the league appeal for funds by saying that both Burnaby and Vancouver Caps recently "came out in spanking new uniforms which cost about $1,500 and, if they can do that, why can't their sponsors put money like that into the league, which I am doing here?"

First-place finisher will meet the fourth-place club and second will go against third in the best-of-three semi-finals. Finals will be a best-of-five affair.

First place is vital because with it goes the home-floor advantage in all series. And that is why Scott-Moncrief is troubled. He feels Scorpions have won that honor but he won't know for sure until Thursday.

"That's when they'll show us how we've been shafted," he said wryly.

Smith Has a Plan For His All-Stars

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — "I'd like to package them all up and take them back to Buffalo," said Floyd Smith after coaching his first National Hockey League team to victory Tuesday night.

The Prince of Wales Conference produced the better skaters and shooters for a 7-5 win over the Campbell Conference, coached by Fred Shero of Philadelphia Flyers.

Smith, coach of Buffalo Sabres, got a marvellous performance from his No. 1 all-star line of Rick Martin, Pete Mahovlich and Guy Lafleur, which scored three goals and drew seven assists.

Six records were broken in the 29th all-star game and seven others were equalled. For two periods, the game was little more than a fast skate as the Wales Conference built a 7-1 lead.

But the Campbell Conference rallied for four third-period goals and an upset seemed in the making until a minor penalty to defenceman John Marks of Chicago Black Hawks with less than five minutes left halted the rally.

Seven players shared the Wales Conference scoring. Martin, the Buffalo left winger, and Mahovlich and Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens, each scored once as did Brad Park of Boston Bruins, Al MacAdam of California Golden Seals, Dan Maloney of Detroit Red Wings and Marcel Dionne of the Los Angeles Kings.

Dennis Ververgaert of Vancouver Canucks, playing in his first all-star game and at left wing for the first time, scored the two fastest goals in all-star history when he got his pair for the Campbell Conference within a 10-second span in the third period.

Curt Bennett of Atlanta Flames, Denis Potvin of New York Islanders and Steve Vickers of New York Rangers also scored for the losers.

Shero, who had the dubious honor of becoming the first coach to lose two consecutive all-star games, said the Campbell Conference all-stars, with 10 rookies in the lineup, were nervous and tight in the first two periods.

"I don't think the penalty to Marks was warranted at that time," Shero said, noting that it hurt the losers after they had come up with four goals in a row.

"But then again, we didn't deserve to win, we were so far behind. The other team was sharper. They had maybe a little more talent. I think our group could have played a little better but they were so nervous it was unbelievable."

Smith, in good humor, said he would like to snatch his winning all-star lineup for the Sabres.

"Shave their hair off and everything, take them back, put a helmet on them and you would never know who they are," he said.

Curt Continues To Spark Cats

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Curt Fraser is a young man on the move. And an honest one, as well.

The 18-year-old Victoria winger continued his hot scoring spree against Western Canada Hockey League rivals by scoring two more goals Tuesday to spark Cougars' 7-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings.

It marked the ninth straight game in which Fraser has scored at least one goal.

In the stretch, the six-foot-one Fraser has doubled his goals output. He scored 14 goals in Victoria's first 33 games, matched that production total in the last nine games.

You can't say it was intentional, but his scoring methods Tuesday might typify the honesty with which Fraser goes about his business.

Fraser was assured of extending his consecutive-scoring streak with a fluke goal at 4:58 of the second period at Memorial Arena. An attempted passout by Fraser from behind the net eluded Edmonton starting netminder Tim Thomlinson and trickled home.

Twelve second later Fraser scored a more classic-looking goal, firing a sizzling shot to beat Thomlinson cleanly.

It was almost as if Fraser, always a hustler and among one of the more dependable Victoria players this season, had reason to be embarrassed about his first goal.

The two goals broke open a tight game and the Cougars cruised home comfortably to victory before 1,954 fans.

Ahead 2-1 after the first, the Cougars made it 5-2 after two periods and outscored the tiring Oil Kings 2-1 in the final frame.

Defenceman Tim Williams also scored two goals for Victoria while Mike Will, Dale Ewasiuk and Gregg Anderson added singles. Doug Lecuyer scored twice for the Oil Kings and Wayne Babych added one.

The 10 goals are apt to disguise the game's ruggedness. Referee Bruce Garside called eight minors against Victoria and seven against Edmonton, in addition to a fighting major for each side, but it was, physically, a strenous game.

Both Oil Kings and Cougars checked strongly.

Fortunately for the Cougars, they seemed to show better staying power. They skated stronger and better as the game progressed while the Oil King, playing their fourth game in five days, tired noticeably in the final half.

Williams, playing his strongest game in several days, sparked a solid defensive performance that provided goaltender Murray Bannerman with good support. Bannerman made 34 stops compared to the 36 turned away by Thomlinson and replacement Dan Shearer, but the Edmonton pair seemed to have more of the difficult chances.

The victory, Cougars' fifth in the seven games this month, kept Victoria seven points behind Medicine Hat Tigers, the third-place club in the Western Division.

The Tigers protected their lead by tripping Brandon Wheat Kings 8-4 in Medicine Hat.

In the only other game played Tuesday, Saskatoon Blades dealt Flin Flon Bombers their second straight shutout, 5-0.

Saints Sign Hank Stram

Times News Services

New Orlean Saints are bringing Hank Stram back as a coach in the National Football League and Harland Svare is out at San Diego because, he says, of a psychiatrist.

Saints announced on Tuesday the signing of Stram to a five-year contract worth "in excess of $1 million."

The selection of Stram as the Saints' next coach has been professional football's worst-kept secret for more than a month.

Stram was fired by the Kansas City Chiefs in 1974 with seven years remaining on his reported $100,000 contract. However, the Chiefs payments to Stram were suspended last fall when he refused to divulge to the club the amount of money he was making on his contract with CBS as a sports commentator.

The Saints fired coach John North after his team registered a 1-6 record for the first half of last season. North was replaced on an interim basis by Ernie Hefferle, who also registerd a 1-6 mark.

Svare was fired Tuesday as general manger of San Diego Chargers, a post he held since 1971, and he immediately blamed a psychiatrist's book about him.

The book, still unpublished, was wirtten by Dr. Arnold Mandell of the University of California at San Diego, whom Svare allowed to spend a season with the club two years ago.

Titled Nightmare Season, it discusses a drug scandal which occurred in 1973 when Svare coached the Chargers through the team's worst season.

"I'm deeply distrubed with Dr. Arnold Mandell's book which has destroyed my credibility . . ." Svare said. He indicated he plans legal action.

It also was a sad day for Seattle Seahawks, an NFL expansion team.

Lloyd Nordstrom, majority owner of the Seahawks died of unknown causes while vacationing in Mexico. He was 65.

Nordstrom and his wife had attended the Super Bowl game in Miami Sunday, and was staying at a new resort, Cancun, when he died.

Balking Referee Delays Decision

VANCOUVER — A stubborn referee has heightened the suspense of waiting for Victoria Scorpions of the Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Basketball League.

The game scheduled here Tuesday between Burnaby Bullets and fourth-place North Shore Mountaineers — the final game of the season for both clubs — had to be postponed because one referee refused to officiate the game.

Burnaby is only two points behind league-leading Scorpions, who have finished their schedule.

The referee said he wouldn't work as long as suspended Burnaby coach George Alexander was in the stands. League-president Basil Sands, who was in attendance, said he couldn't throw Alexander out because he was a paying spectator.

So the game was postponed to Thursday and will be played prior to the final scheduled game of the season between Vaancouver Capilanos and Vancouver Athletics.

Alexander was suspended two weeks ago for injuring a referee during a scuffle during a game.

THERE'S NO WAIT FOR EVERT'S DATE

FAIRFAX, Va. (UPI)—Chris Evert obviously didn't want to keep her date waiting.

She took just 45 minutes Tuesday night to polish off Kathy Kuykendall of Miami, 6-2, 6-1, to advance to the quarter-finals of the $75,000 Virginia Slims of Washington tennis tournament. Then she left with her escort for the evening — Jack Ford, the president's son.

As the pair posed for pictures in the media room, Evert, who was once Jimmy Connors' fiancee, quipped: "We're engaged."

The tournament official who set up the date quickly responded: "That's in humor, at least right now."

Before Ford was introduced, Evert said she'd rather spend her time playing tennis than making public appearances.

"When I have time off, I don't want to be in the limelight," she said.

But she didn't seem to mind when about 20 photographers vied for the best positions to take her picture with Ford.

Under the glare of automatic flashes, Ford pointed to a photographer and said: "I feel like I just got married."

Changes Don't Bother Ralph

By The Canadian Press

When you move around as much as Ralph Backstrom has been lately, it doesn't take you long to adjust to a new uniform.

The veteran professional made his debut with New England Whalers on Tuesday night and scored the goal that gave them a 4-4 tie with Phoenix Roadrunners in a World Hockey Association game.

This has been a trying season for Backstrom, in the 18th season of a professional career that began with Montreal Canadiens.

Backstrom was part-owner of Chicago Cougars when they collapsed at the end of last season. He has barely had time to pack his bags since.

He was one of several Cougars acquired by owner Ivan Mullenix of Denver Spurs. When the Spurs shifted to Ottawa late last month, he went with them, protesting as he went that the move made him a free agent.

Mullenix sold him to the Whalers late last week just before pulling his team out of the league.

In Tuesday's other games, Calgary Cowboys humbled Edmonnton Oilers 10-3 and Toronto Toros defeated Houston Aeros 7-5.

Backstrom, whose goal was his 22nd, wasn't the only newcomer to produce for the Whalers in his first game. Mike Rogers, acquired from Edmonton Oilers on Monday, scored New England's third goal.

Lorne O'Donnell and Rosaire Paiement were the other scorers for the Whalers, who learned earlier in the day back problems will keep Tom Webster out of the lineup for up to six weeks.

'Months' Before Campbell Replaced

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Hockey League's board of governors took the first of three steps towards naming a successor to 72-year-old president Clarence Campbell when they named a five-man "search committee" to screen candidates for the job. But it appeared the second and third steps would be a long time coming as the board concluded two days of meetings.

Campbell said Tuesday that no progress had been made towards rewording the league constitution to permit him to hold the dual roles of president and chairman of the board while grooming the man who eventually would take his place. And without any guidelines on which to proceed, it could be months before the committee can direct itself towards naming a new head.

Campbell, tired and drawn at the meeting's close, made his point succinctly: "I want to retire."

The lack of progress with the constitutional amendments, which Campbell had expected to be accepted before the search committee was named, forced the governors to call a special meeting in New York on Feb. 27.

By that time, possibly, the committee of team presidents, William Jennings of New York Rangers, Bruce Norris of Detroit, Jacques Courtois of Montreal, Roy Boe of New York Islanders and Campbell himself, will have a better idea of which people are available for the job and how the league can go about putting him in office.

A prepared statement released by the board said the five-man group named Tuesday would "look both within the ranks and outside hockey if necessary."

There were two other developments Tuesday. The 1976 intra-league draft, which was to have taken place if the expansion to Denver and Seattle had been successful, was cancelled formally. There were protests that the obviously weak franchises would have benefitted from a draft, expansion or not, but a unanimous vote was necessary to permit the draft and four member teams dissented—ending any argument.

Also at the meetings, the board reduced the minimum number of players a team must have under contract from 27 skaters and three goaltenders to 24 skaters and three goalies. This, Campbell said, would cause further consolidation by NHL teams of their support of the minor leagues.

Area Sports Fishermen Request Ban on Netting

Organized sports fishermen on the southern end of Vancouver Island are asking for a complete closure to commercial net fishing in the southern Strait of Georgia and Gulf Islands areas.

A resolution to this effect has been drafted by the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association for consideration at both the Vancouver Island Wildlife Association meeting next month and the B.C. Wildlife Federation convention in May at the University of British Columbia.

At this point, I'd like to appeal to all uncommitted sports salmon fishermen — who form a vast and apparently apathetic majority — to get behind this effort.

Become informed. Write letters to your various governmental representatives.

The brief states simply:

"WHEREAS the Gulf Islands (statistical areas 17 and 18) are a major recreational fishery area.

"AND WHREAS the coho and chinook stocks are the primary stocks on which the people depend for recreational fishing.

"AND WHEREAS these stocks contribute significantly to commercial catches.

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that in the interest of rehabilitation of the stocks in the southern portion of the Strait of Georgia and the Gulf Islands be closed to commercial netting to protect the many nursery areas and areas holding needed spawning stocks."

This area is a prime nursery ground for both salmon species right at the time netting is being carried out.

One of the most dangerous commercial fishing practices, carried out by an increasing number of drum seiners, involves what is called "rolling the bunt."

Instead of pursing the net alongside the boat, allowing undersized salmon grilse to escape through the webbing, the practice has been to bring the whole net up on deck.

This extends the webbing in one plane, making it smaller, and the toll on grilse is said to be high.

"Any drum seining on a grilse nursery area where they roll the bunt means a lot of grilse killed," said Victoria Fish and Game spokesman Howard English.

And only the netters seem to be guilty of persisting in practices that take a high "incidental" catch of undersized salmon.

Last fall, the trollers voluntarily abandoned the Swiftsure area and requested federal fisheries to close it down because too many grilse were being landed.

In the supporting brief to the resolution, the club notes: "Heavy commercial netting this past fishing season (1975) has greatly endangered the coho and chinook spawning stocks and drasticaly reduced the recreational fishing catch."

Since the commercial catch in the vicinity in question is small, relative to the overall return, why not close it completely?

This measure would help both the sports catch and the spawning return, which is due course would help increase the commercial stocks available in other areas.

It boils down to a simple matter of sacrificing a little now for a lot in the future.

But then, maybe all of you sports fishermen who haven't

A Victoria Curling Club entry skipped by Walt Summerfelt captured the first event in the 5th annual Esquimalt senior men's bonspiel at the Sports Centre.

Summerfelt, supported by Jack Daniels, Jack Bowering and Roy Clarke, downed clubmate Les Court's rink in the "A" final.

An Alberni foursome skipped by W. Hall defeated Esquimalt's J. Dahl in the "B" final; a Victoria rink skipped by S. W. Cowie downed Mel Pederson in the "C" final, while Ralph Cooper's Juan de Fuca entry captured "D" honors with a victory over Bill Graham of Victoria.

Spectrum Rookie Wrecks Totems

Kees Den Otter, a rookie forward who stands six-foot-five, used his stature to advantage Tuesday and helped Spectrum to a 75-48 victory over host Victoria Totems in a Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League game.

Den Otter, who was playing his first full game, contributed only three points to the offence but proved especially valuable under the boards, grabbing a total of 11 rebounds.

After playing in a reserve role, Den Otter got the starting nod Tuesday as a replacement of top-rebounder Larry Cole, who is currently in New Zealand with the Victoria Bate softball team.

Harbindar Sanghara and Daljeet Ghang provided the Spectrum offence with 23 and 18 points, respectively. Forrest Partington led winless Totems with 16 points.

In other games, unbeaten Oak Bay Bays trounced winless Esquimalt Dockers 91-38 at Oak Bay, Dunsmuir Demons topped host Parkland Panthers 79-71, Belmont Braves bounced host Mt. Douglas Rams 85-59 and Reynolds Roadrunners walked over winless host Claremont Spartans, 71-46.

Tom Sinnott sparked Bays with 17 points while Bruce Shotton was the only Esquimalt player to hit double figures with 12.

Rick Jeffery set a blistering pace for the much-improved Demons with 25 points and an incredible 26 rebounds while clubmate Bryan Grant was the high overall marksman with 26 points. Mike Montgomery scored 25 for Panthers.

Bruce Robertson scored 23 points to lead the Braves, who outscored their opponents 41-20 in the second half. Al Duddridge led Mt. Doug with 16.

Jim Dunn again emerged atop Reynolds scoring with 23 points while Gord Lee and Mike Wyatt had 11 each for Claremont.

Four Straight For Reynolds

Rhonda Kellar continued her hot scoring pace Tuesday night and led Reynolds Roadrunners to a fourth straight victory in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League with a 45-27 decision over host Claremont.

In other games, Victoria Tigers dropped visiting Spectrum 45-30, Oak Bay eked out a 37-34 win over visiting Esquimalt Dockettes, Mt. Douglas Ramblers shackled visiting Belmont Tomahawks 34-19 and Dunsmuir Demons tripped the Panthers 46-35 at Parkland.

Miss Kellar fired 23 points and along with Tracy McAra, who added 11 points, helped spark a second-half surge that bolstered a thin 19-14 lead Reynolds held at the break.

The 23 points, Miss Kellar's highest total for a single game so far this season, boosted her total to 67 points in four games and left her 10 points behind league-leading scorer Shelley Godfrey of Victoria.

Miss Godfrey fired an even 20 points to pace the Tigers to their fourth straight win while clubmate Terry Paone added 12 points. Kathy Kozak and Evie Thompson topped Spectrum with 10 points each.

Marie Morrison dunked seven points to lead an even attack and tight defence by Ramblers, who held Belmont to five points in the first half. Sheila Chalmers led Belmont with 10.

Dunsmuir's win was sparked by a 16-point effort from Cheryl Archer and a 14-point production from Shelly Canning while Angela Simpson fired 14 points in a losing cause for Parkland.

Tretiak Levels Accusation

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Vladislav Tretiak, goaltender of the Soviet Army Central Sports Club hockey team, said in a newspaper article today that he was told the ice was "fixed" when his team tied 3-3 with Montreal Canadiens on their recent tour of North America.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said that in an article in the Komsomolskaya Pravda newspaper today "Tretiak notes that the Canadians wished so much that Montreal should win that even, as he was told later, ice men tried to help their favorites by making the ice sticky and uneven in order to spoil our passes."

But Tretiak said that his team was greatly impressed by the brand of hockey played by the Canadiens.

Commenting on their match against the Soviet team, he said: "This is my idea of real ice hockey—superfast, combination, tough (but not rough), interesting and dramatic."

Hogan Gets Golf Honor

FAR HILLS, N.J. (AP) — Ben Hogan has been named winner of the 1976 Bob Jones Award, presented annually by the United States Golf Association.

Hogan, one of the greatest players the game has ever known, will accept the award at the USGA's annual meeting Jan. 31 in New York.

The award is presented for distinguished sportsmanship and contributions to the sport. It is named for the former golf star who retired from active play in 1930.

Player's Father Suffers Attack

MIAMI (AP) — The father of Dallas Cowboys safety Charlie Waters suffered a heart attack during the Cowboys' 21-17 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers in Sunday's National Football League Super Bowl game.

A hospital spokesman said Marshall Waters, 70, of Dallas, was resting comfortably, "but his condition is still serious." The elder Waters was rushed from Miami's Orange Bowl after suffering the attack late in the game.

97% OF NORTH AMERICA'S ADULT POPULATION WILL FIT COMFORTABLY IN THE FRONT SEAT OF A VOLVO.

If you've ever had the feeling that the driver's seat of your car was designed to fit anyone but you, come and sit in a Volvo.

Volvo's front bucket seats were designed to fit almost every adult human being in North America.

You can adjust them up, down, forward, backward to conform to your particular form. You can tilt the backrest forward if your arms are short, or backward if your arms are long. You can adjust the angle of the seat bottom to allow for the length and proportions of your legs. And to keep you comfortable even on long drives, there's a lumbar support at the small of your back that adjusts from soft to firm.

Adult human beings have also been known to sit in the backseats of cars. So at Volvo, the backseat is not an afterthought. Swing the center armrest up, and there's room for three six-footers.

But even with all this room inside, Volvo doesn't take up much room outside. It's about two feet shorter than the average full-sized domestic sedan. And it can turn in a smaller circle than a Volkswagen Rabbit.

Which means we've not only built a car that can easily handle almost any person. We've built a car that almost any person can easily handle.

Super Bowl Ticket 'Swindle' Just an Unfortunate Mixup?

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — The so-called Super Bowl Swindle was just a mix-up and those involved can get their ticket money back, a lawyer said Tuesday amidst a furor over a travel package in which some fans wound up without tickets.

Instead of getting to watch Pittsburgh Steelers from the stands, the fans viewed the game on television sets in hotel rooms.

But James Pantelis, operator of International Travel Bureau of Youngstown and its subsidiary, Super Tours International, which set up the package, sees no need to refund the full price of the tour, his Youngstown lawyer, Carmen Policy, said.

"After all, they got their rooms, flight and everything else promised," Policy said.

Policy said Pantelis told him that only about 250 travellers failed to get their Super Bowl tickets and denied that the mixup affected 3,000 to 5,000 persons as originally estimated by Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Pittsburgh authorities. Police later scaled down their estimate to less than 1,000.

And he blamed the lack of tickets on an unidentified west coast ticket broker from whom Pantelis said he ordered the tickets by certified wire. The broker "returned a substantial amount of Pantelis' money, but that didn't help him with the fans with no seats," Policy said.

Policy said that when Pantelis became aware on the eve of the game that he wasn't going to be able to resolve the ticket shortage, he posted signs in Fort Lauderdale hotels reading, "those of you who haven't received your Super Bowl tickets may obtain a $25 refund."

The face value of a Super Bowl ticket was $20 and the refund offer still stands, Policy said late Tuesday.

Whether all customers got what they paid for is one thing, but the suggestion this is an international fraud is without merit," Policy said.

Meanwhile, federal and local authorities in Pittsburgh and Fort Lauderdale were investigating.

In Pittsburgh, authorities said that at least five agencies bought the tour package from Super Tours for retailing at prices of $350 to $800.

James J. Flaherty, Allegheny County commissioner in Pittsburgh, said he has asked county officials to determine whether the ticketless fans could file class-action recovery suits.

"We feel that if they went down there, they went down there to see the Steelers in person," Flaherty said. "If they wanted to watch the game on TV, they could have stayed at home."

FEATURED SPEAKER at B.C. Junior Hockey League all-star game banquet in Nanaimo next Tuesday will be Eddie Dorohoy of Victoria, former star with Victoria Cougars of now-defunct Western Hockey League. Other head table speakers include league-president Bryan Couling of Kelowna and Nanaimo mayor Frank Ney. Tickets are available in Nanaimo outlets or the Cougar office in Victoria.

Maple Ridge Coach Fined

KELOWNA (CP) — The British Columbia Junior Hockey League fined Maple Ridge Blazer coach Lawrence Gingras $300 Tuesday after he pulled his team from the ice to protest officiating during a game in Kelowna Sunday.

The players returned to the ice after Gingras was given a two-minute warning by the referee.

Couling also announced a two-game suspension to Maple Ridge defenseman Rob Neeld for his actions during the game in Kelowna. Neeld was given a game misconduct for initiating a fight while he was in the penalty box.

Couling also placed Merritt Centennial forward Greg Agar on probation for the rest of the season after Agar became involved with several fans during a game in Kelowna Friday night. Couling said any further incident could lead to a lengthy suspension

Meanwhile, on the ice, sixth-place Merritt surprised leading Vernon by clipping the Vikings 4-3 in one of two games played Tuesday.

Penticton Vees defeated Kelowna Buckaroos 10-5 in the other game.

Vernon remains eight points ahead of second-place Nanaimo.

Riders Sign A Homebrew

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Whitworth College running back Brian O'Hara has signed a contract with Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, the school says.

O'Hara a native of Regina, is scheduled to report to the team in June. He is expected to be tried as a running back.

The six-foot-one, 185-pound senior spent most of last season sidelined with an ankle injury, but still earned all conference honorable mention in the Northwest Conference.

In his junior year he gained 612 yards and averaged 83.7 yards a game.

Stick-Waver Suspended

QUEBEC (CP) — Raymond Lagace, president of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, Tuesday suspended player Michel Bechard of Quebec Remparts for three games for threatening an opposing coach with his stick.

In addition, Lagace fined the two clubs involved — the Remparts and Sorel Black Hawks — $250 each in a related incident.

Bechard's suspension came after he threatened Sorel coach Rodrigue Lemoyne with his stick Jan. 16. The two clubs received the fines for taking part in a brawl on the same date.

Consolidation Preferred to Changes

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Football League rules committee recommended four changes in playing rules Tuesday and rejected proposals that would have drastically altered the kicking game.

"It is significant that after dramatic changes last year, the clubs felt it was time for consolidation rathed than to go ahead with more dramatic changes," commissioner Jake Gaudaur told reporters after the committee made its recommendations.

Gaudaur said in past years there have been up to 40 proposed rule changes requiring a day-long meeting, but this year there were only 20 proposals which took less than half a working day to consider. The recommendations on the four proposed changes will be considered by the CFL's executive committee, which can reject them in whole or in part, during the annual meeting in Toronto Feb. 19-20.

Suggested changes that were rejected included reducing the value of a field goal, from three points to two and increasing the penalty for no-yards infractions.

The four changes that will be recommended to the executive committee are relatively minor when compared with changes last year that permitted blocking above the waist on punt returns and allowed two-point converts following touchdowns.

The rules committee recommended the penalty for a kickoff that goes out of bounds or which doesn't travel 10 yards be reduced to five yards from 10 yards. The receiving team would still have the option to take possession at the point the ball went out of bounds or at the point it recovered the ball.

Another recommended change would award a two-point safety to the team that blocks a kick if the kick goes out of bounds in the end zone or is recovered by the kicking team in its end zone, regardless of whether the kick was blocked in the end zone or the field of play. Under the existing rules, only a single point is awarded if the kick is blocked outside the end zone.

A new rule would discourage crackback blocks against linebackers by offensive players in motion. A 15-yard penalty would be assessed if a player clearly positioned outside the offensive tackle moved in the direction of the ball prior to the snap and blocked an opponent below the waist within two yards on either side of the line of scrimmage.

The fourth proposed change would make the penalty for pass interference by a defensive team within its 10-yard line the same as the penalty for pass interference in the end zone. A first down would be awarded to the offensive squad at the 10-yard line if the line of scrimmage was outside the 20. Half the distance to the goal-line from the line of scrimmage would be stepped off and a first down awarded if the line of scrimmage was within the 20.

Gaudaur said the rejected changes on placekicking, punting and no-yards infractions dominated discussions, but there was little support for a major overhaul in kicking rules.

The rules committee also voted against adopting the fair catch regulation on punts.

The fair catch, used in American professional football, allows a punt-return man to simply stick his hand in the air to signal that his team will take the ball where he receives it and won't attempt a runback. Defenders are not permitted to tackle him.

Edmonton Eskimo quarterback Tom Wilkinson appeared to be the direct target of one suggestion which was also rejected.

It would have required the quarterback to remain motionless for one second immediately prior to the snap of the ball.

Wilkinson has been widely criticized by opposing coaches for bobbing his head prior to the snap, drawing linemen offside in the process.

Paterson's Rink Defending Title

An Esquimalt rink skipped by Gord Paterson, last year's big winner, heads the list of entries scheduled to start play next Monday in the 15th annual Esquimalt men's curling bonspiel.

The four-event 'spiel will wind up the following weekend.

Following are the first games for all rinks:

Mixed Bonspiel At Juan de Fuca

A limit entry of 64 rinks has been set for the inaugural mixed bonspiel at the new Juan de Fuca Curling Club which gets underway Feb. 6.

Play in the three-day 'spiel will be in four events on a Chisholm draw.

The entry fee is $40 per rink and further information may be obtained by telephoning 478-8384.

Autopsy Ordered In Player's Death

LITCHFIELD, Minn. (AP) — An autopsy was scheduled today to determine why a young hockey player collapsed and died during a high school game Tuesday night.

Dr. Fred Schnell, Meeker County coroner, said the youth was Keith Potter, 16, a goalie for Hutchinson, Minn., high school.

Dr. Schnell said the youth "just collapsed while playing" and was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

The youth had been hit in the chest by a puck earlier in the game, Schnell said, but was wearing protective equipment.

"We don't know what the youngster died from," Schnell said. "He was playing hockey and just dropped over.

"We did everything we could to bring him around."

He said a spectator—an anesthetist at a local hospital—tried to revive the boy but failed.

St. Cloud Cathedral was playing Hutchison at the Litchfield Arena, where Hutchinson plays its home games. The game was halted when Potter collapsed.

GAY LIB ADS STILL REFUSED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun refused Monday to accept a classified advertisement for a gay liberation newspaper pending an appeal of a British Columbia Human Rights board of inquiry order that the Sun make its advertising columns available to the group.

John Toogood, director of marketing and advertising for the Sun said the advertisement for the group newspaper Gay Tide was rejected because the Human Rights Board's decision has been appealed to the B.C. Supreme Court.

The board of inquiry ruled last week that the evening newspaper discriminated against the Gay Alliance Toward Equality by refusing a similar ad in October, 1974.

Lawson's Plan Shot Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chief negotiator for British Columbia's general trucking companies said Tuesday it would be impractical at this time to adopt a proposal of Senator Ed Lawson to get negotiations going again.

"Lawson is asking for total capitulation by Johnston Terminals' and he should reassess that position," said Dave Chapman, president of Transport Labor Relations (TLR).

Chapman also suggested that Lawson take a second look at an accommodation offered him by the TLR that no action would be taken on a Johnston's legal action against the Teamsters' Union during bargaining or during any strike or lockout, and that the damages suit would be wiped out in the final settlement.

Lawson, the Teamsters' B.C. president and an international vice-president, said Monday the union won't bargain with Johnston Terminals, "with the writ hanging over the heads of the employees and the union."

Lawson said the union had advised Chapman it was prepared to negotiate immediately with all other companies except Johnston's.

But Chapman pointed out that Lawson's proposal is impractical because the accreditation under the B.C. Labor Code demands that all 97 companies, including Johnston, be represented at the bargaining table.

Contracts between the companies and the Teamster Locals 213 and 31 expired last Dec. 31. The locals represent about 5,500 employees on an average rate of $6.40 an hour.

Truckers Off Line

VANCOUVER (CP) — Following a decision by the British Columbia Labor Relations Board, 14 striking truck drivers have ended their picketing of the Standard Oil Co. of B.C. refinery in Burnaby.

The truck drivers had been picketing Standard's $50 million expansion project, preventing about 300 workers from going to work.

After pickets were removed, the workers returned to their jobs.

The heating oill truck drivers are striking against Furnace Oil Sales, a subsidiary of Standard.

The board's ruling means the drivers — seven Teamsters and seven independent operators—will have to confine their picketing to the area where their tank trucks normally load home heating oil.

Trial Scheduled For Bus Driver

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Hydro driver, charged with criminal negligence causing death after a traffic accident, was committed for trial Monday after a preliminary hearing in provincial court.

The Canadian Press distributed an erroneous report Monday that Michael Nenadic, 26, of Vancouver had been given an absolute discharge on the charge of criminal negligence causing death.

Nenadic had also been charged with failure to appear for a preliminary hearing. He was found guilty on that charge but given an absolute discharge.

No date has been set for trial on the criminal negligence charge, laid after a bus collided with a van July 18, killing Peter St. Louis, 16, of Vancouver, a passenger in the van.

MINISTERS DIDN'T SHOW UP

KELOWNA (CP) — The British Columbia Fruit Growers Association's annual convention opened Tuesday with the guest of honor unable to attend, and his replacement failing to turn up. Agriculture Minister Don Phillips could not attend because of a cabinet meeting in Victoria and his replacement, Deputy Minister Sig Peterson, was delayed because of fog at the Victoria airport.

Unions Pressure Habitat

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the British Columbia and Yukon Building and Construction Trades' Council said Tuesday the council will ask the provincial government to make more money available for construction work at the Habitat Forum site in Vancouver's Jericho area so organizers can afford union labor.

Council secretary Roy Gautier said he is convinced the council is being conned mainly by the federal government, which he said is attempting to build the facilities as cheaply as possible with non-union labor.

Forum producer Al Clapp said he doesn't want any union members working on the site. He says many of the 80 workers currently employed are old age pensioners, unemployed or on welfare and are therefore not taking union jobs.

Gautier said the council cannot afford to ignore the project. He questioned the propriety of holding a worldwide conference in facilities built with non-union personnel, in a highly unionized society.

Gautier said the union wants only 25 jobs, just enough so it is represented.

Earlier this month, information pickets went up around the Habitant Forum site protesting the lack of union jobs.

A meeting was held last Friday between council represenatives and Habitat workers to discuss the situation and organizers of Forum sent a letter to the council Tuesday outlining their position.

The Habitat Forum, sponsored by non-government organizations, will parallel the Habitat conference being put on in Vancouver by the United Nations between May 31 and June 11 of this year.

VICTIM PENSIONED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 31-year-old Vancouver man has been awarded $7,500 and a $323 monthly pension after being brutally attacked and beaten. The payment is one of 24 awards totalling more than $75,000 and one of three pensions amounting to almost $1,000 a month given out under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act by the Workers' Compensation Board for the month of December. The man was unidentified.

PNE Rent Pact Likely

Canadian Press

Mayor Art Phillips of Vancouver said Tuesday he feels a rental agreement between the city and the Pacific National Exhibition can be worked out amicably.

The mayor made the comment following a meeting with Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy to clarify an agreement worked out with the previous New Democratic Party government on the rental of land leased by the PNE from the city.

Mrs. McCarthy agreed with the mayor that some kind of acceptable agreement can be worked out.

She said the agreement worked out last Sepetmber was not a legal agreement and that a study would be conducted into just how binding the agreement was.

"This does not mean that I disagree with the concept of rent being paid to the city," she added. "I would just like to consider the legality of a minister entering into agreements of that kind."

The agreement called for the PNE to pay the city $267,000 for 1975 and $500,000 annually for the next 18 years. The NDP government also agreed to help the PNE with its rental payments, contributing half the money.

Phillips also said the Social Credit government agreed to turn over seven or eight acres of Jericho lands.

The land was originally committed to the city by the previous Social Credti government as part of the large Jericho Park.

Pr. George Tax Rate Increases

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — City council has raised the tax rate by three to seven mills and has increased taxes by at least $25 for the average Prince George home owner. The increases came Monday, when the city's $27 million provisional budget was passed, a $2.6 million increase from 1975.

SURREY (CP) — Surrey Council voted Monday not to give its members any salary increases for 1976. Mayor Ed McKitka had promised a 50-per-cent reduction in salaries, then changed the promise to one of 30 per cent. He said Monday, however, that he was pleased with council's decision and thought the salaries were fair. He will receive $21,321 and aldermen will receive $7,106 for their work this year, the same salaries they received last year.

Introducing the first banking package for customers 60 and over that guarantees a minimum 10% bonus on True Savings interest.

Firstbank™ Senior Plan. 60

It all started right here.

In 1969, Bank of Montreal became the first bank in Canada to introduce a plan expressly designed to assist senior citizens. We knew then something had to be done to help combat the effects of inflation for those on fixed incomes.

So we lowered our service charges to everyone age 65 and over. We hoped that other service-oriented companies would follow suit. And they did.

Now we have updated our earlier plan. We've lowered the age of eligibility to 60. And designed a comprehensive package of banking services for our customers 60 and over. It s called the Firstbank Senior Plan. And it's absolutely free. Here is how it can help you.

The guaranteed 10% minimum bonus.

There are special plans at other banks for customers 60 and over. But there's a big difference between what they offer and what we offer. The difference is that only Bank of Montreal offers you a guaranteed 10% minimum bonus on your Firstbank True Savings Account interest for the year ending October 31, 1976.

For example, if the interest credited to your Firstbank Savings Account during the Bank year ending October 31, 1976, amounts to $200, the guaranteed 10% interest bonus will bring your total interest to $220.

However, if major competitors should decide to pay more, your Firstbank Senior Plan bonus will be increased accordingly.

Either way, you are always protected. Because your guaranteed bonus interest can never dip below the 10% minimum. And remember, interest up to $1,000 is completely tax free.

Three for free.

Chequing: The Firstbank Senior Plan entitles you to free chequing. You can write as many cheques as you like on your Firstbank Chequing or Regular Savings account with no service charge whatsoever.

Utility Bills: You are also entitled to pay your own utility bills conveniently at any Bank of Montreal branch with no service charge.

Travellers Cheques: You can buy as many as you wish at any branch without paying commission on them.

In Addition: The Firstbank Senior Plan entitles you to an annual reduction on a Bank of Montreal Safety Deposit Box or Safekeeping Service. For example, the most popular-sized box will rent for only $4.50 per year.

Term Deposits that pay a monthly income.

If you want to earn the highest monthly interest on your savings, a Monthly Income Deposit Receipt is an excellent investment. You need an initial deposit of $5,000. We will arrange terms to suit your own plans —from two months to six years.

You will receive interest payments on your deposit each month. We will credit your account, or mail you a cheque if you prefer.

In this way, you can supplement your monthly savings while your initial deposit remains intact.

Your card.

As a Firstbank Senior Plan customer you will receive a personal identification card. This card will serve as your introduction to Bank of Montreal branches across Canada, ensuring you the same Plan benefits in those branches.

In total, the Firstbank Senior Plan entitles you to six convenient, money-saving Bank services. Plus an identification card. And it's all free. All you have to do is apply.

So take advantage of this unique banking Plan that has been specially designed for people 60 and over.

Stop by your Bank of Montreal branch and have a talk with us about our Firstbank Senior Plan. You'll like what you hear. After all, we started it all.

And we'll be glad to arrange your Firstbank Senior Plan for you.

Let's talk.

CABBIE SUES KISSINGER FOR SALT 'TREASON'

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuter)—A taxicab driver has filed suit in U.S. District Court charging state Secretary Henry Kissinger with treason, court records showed Tuesday.

The suit has been assigned to federal Judge William Sweigert but no date has yet been set for hearing.

Cab driver Lawrence R. Bertles Jr., 33, based his suit on allegations that Kissinger was "working for the other side" because of his handling of the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) in Moscow.

Bertles also claimed that Kissinger allowed the Soviet Union to increase the permissible number of its strategic Backfire bombers without a counter-balancing concession for the U.S.

Tax Fraud By Nixon Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Internal Revenue Service has reopened a civil tax fraud investigation into Richard Nixon's 1969 tax return, the Washington Post and the New York Times reported today.

In a story by Bob Woodward, one of two reporters who gained fame through reporting the Watergate case, the Post noted the IRS had concluded in 1974 it did not have sufficient evidence to charge the former president with civil fraud.

Now, the paper reported, informed sources said the agency "believes it can show that the former president had had knowledge of a backdated deed claiming an illegal deduction for his gift of papers to the government."

IRS officials would neither confirm nor deny the reports. An official contacted late Tuesday night noted the bureau almost never discusses tax returns or tax problems of individuals.

"In the case of the former president," the official said, "the only public statements we have made were in congressional committees when we discussed certain disclosures which we did not originate."

If fraud is proved against Nixon, the Post said, he would be forced to pay $222,121.45, which would include $148,080.97 for a 1969 deficiency found by the IRS in 1974 plus a 50 per cent penalty for fraud of $74,040.48.

Nixon could challenge a fraud assessment in court.

Nixon had no legal obligation to pay the 1969 tax deficiency because the three-year statute of limitations had expired. But fraud has no statute of limitations and makes the basic tax deficiency also collectible at any time.

U.S. MAY BAN TASER GUN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New York City already bans its sale. Canada will stop importing it Feb. 1. Now Congress is being asked to prohibit it nationally.

It's the Taser electric shock gun. Looking like a flashlight, the gun expels miniature harpoons carrying 50,000 volts to its victim and the pain renders victims incapacitated for several minutes.

Rep. Lawrence Coughlin (Rep.—Pa.) said Tuesday he plans to introduce legislation to classify the weapon as a "destructive device" under the gun control act of 1968.

U.S. Failing On Test Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is not living up to the spirit of treaties limiting the testing and spread of nuclear weapons, the chief U.S. negotiator of the 1968 non-proliferation treaty said Tuesday.

Adrian Fisher, now dean of the Georgetown Law Centre, told a Senate hearing the U.S. has lost sight of the true goals of that pact and the 1963 nuclear test ban treaty.

"I do have a sense of disappointment about the test ban," Fisher said. "It included a commitment to work as hard as we could to eliminate the production and testing of all nuclear weapons.

"Somewhere between 1963 and to date this has ceased to be true," he told a Senate government operations subcommittee.

CIA Plots Lawful

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. justice department lawyers have determined that no federal laws were violated in the CIA's assassination plots against foreign leaders, the department's chief spokesman says.

"In the first place, we don't know if anything happened, if anyone was killed" because of CIA planning, said public information director Robert Havel. He added there are no federal laws against such assassinations.

'Welfare Czar' Urged In U.S. $394B Budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring opposition to "hollow" promises in an election year, President Ford today proposed a $394.2 billion budget emphasizing stronger national defence, business and investor tax cuts to create jobs, and making elderly sick and working poor pay more of their own way.

In his only new initiative, Ford proposed a "welfare czar" to co-ordinate federal welfare, housing and food payments by setting uniform U.S.-wide standards for benefits. The budget gave no details, but officials said Ford would reorganize the programs under executive authority subject to congressional veto.

Ford proposed greater cuts in individual income taxes beginning in July, but also asked for a maximum increase of $49.50 next year in the social security payroll tax —the tax that cuts deepest into low and moderate income workers.

The president said defence and energy received the highest priorities in his proposal for fiscal 1977 being sent to Congress today.

"This is not a policy of the quick fix; it does not hold out the hollow promise that we can wipe out inflation and unemployment overnight," Ford said.

For the first time, a president's budget will be reviewed by the new joint congressional budget committee. It is likely to be frisky and independent both in dealing with Ford's proposals and suggesting its own.

Although he proposed spending $43 billion more than the government will collect in taxes and other revenues, Ford said the budget represented "responsible fiscal policy." The expected deficit in the current fiscal year is $76 billion.

"If we try to stimulate the economy beyond its capacity to respond, it will lead only to a future whirlwind of inflation and unemployment," Ford said.

The budget will generate controversy in this presidential election year, but one of the potentially most explosive proposals—the higher payroll taxes to finance social security benefit increases—won support from chairman Al Ullman, (Dem.-Ore.) of the tax-writing house ways and means committee.

Instead of raising the $16,500 ceiling on wages subject to the 5.85 per cent social security tax in 1977, Ford proposed increasing the tax rate to 6.15 per cent. This would increase the maximum obligation to $1,014.75 a year.

Economists consider this regressive because it takes 6.15 per cent of gross income from workers earning under $16,500—but a declining percentage from those who earn more.

Ford recommended an $8.3 billion increase in the defence budget, saying "we dare not do less."

The $101.1 billion request, Ford said, means an actual increase in spending beyond the boost to cover inflation. He said he would have to ask for more if the arms limitation talks with the Russians were not successful.

WALLACE HITS 'GANG-UP'

CHICAGO (UPI)—Alabama Gov. George Wallace has accused his fellow Democratic presidential hopefuls of working together to knock him out of contention for his party's nomination.

Wallace, in his first northern campaign swing, made a three-stop swing through Illinois Tuesday in hopes of cashing in on the state's March 16 primary.

He charged other candidates have banded together and agreed upon a concerted strategy to defeat him in the primaries.

"They got together and said, 'you take him on here and I'll take him on there.' "

Searle Data 'Sloppy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A six-month federal investigation of G. D. Searle and Co. has turned up widespread evidence of "sloppy" research studies, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) told Congress on Tuesday.

Because of initial findings in the $500,000 Searle investigation, Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said drug inspectors are expanding their review of similar data submitted by other major pharmaceutical companies.

Schmidt said he expects the concentrated effort to show that Searle was "the exception rather than the norm in industry," but that problems are frequent in laboratories conducting studies with animals.

The Searle data is being turned over to the Justice Department and, because of the possibility of prosecution, some of the findings must remain confidential, the commissioner said.

Schmidt said that as a result of the FDA investigation of Searle, new warning labels will be required for Flagyl, a drug used to treat a common vaginal infection, and Aldactone, a widely prescribed anti-hypertensive drug; the artificial sweetener Aspartame will be kept off the market until all safety questions are resolved; the cardio-vascular drug Norpace probably will have marketing approval delayed a year; and a Searle oral contraceptive and an intra-uterine contraceptive device, both new on the market, are being re-evaluated.

"The problems range from what could be called mere carelessness to serious deficiencies of study design and technique and reporting," Schmidt said, and Searle was unable to account for most of the discrepancies.

UAW Demands Security

DETROIT (AP) — Job security and increased layoff benefits, looming as top issues in coming contract talks, were in for extensive discussion as delegates representing 700,000 United Auto Workers (UAW) met here today.

"Everywhere, the cry for job security and improvements in SUB (supplemental unemployment benefits) loom as the top issues this time," UAW vice - president Irving Bluestone said in a recent interview.

About 1,000 delegates were expected for today's opening session of the three-day UAW production workers conference.

A similar conference for UAW skilled trades workers is to be held in February. Recommendations from both meetings are to be brought before a collective-bargaining convention in the spring, when a blueprint is to be drafted for new three-year contracts covering 850,000 UAW members. The current contracts expire in September.

Unlike prior contract talks, money-in-the-pocket demands are not expected to play as prominent a role in this fall's negotiations.

Instead, the top issue this year likely will be job security—an issue prompted by the widespread worker layoffs caused by the auto industry's two-year slump.

Most UAW members weathered the high inflationary period of two years ago without substantial economic harm because of cost-of-living allowance clauses won in prior contracts.

However, the union has been battered by the subsequent recession, which sent car sales into a nosedive and layoffs soaring.

A year ago, at the depth of the industry's slump, more than 200,000 hourly auto workers were on long-term layoff. The unprecedented labor cuts depleted laid-off workers' SUB benefits for the first time in the 20-year history of the SUB funds.

Layoffs have receded in the last year, and SUB payments have been turned on again. However, about 65,000 workers remain on indefinite layoff, and the companies have eliminated another 100,000 jobs by placing a freeze on hiring in some plants when vacancies occurred.

False Report Stops Airline

OTTAWA (CP) — A Laker Airways Ltd. air charter licence has been suspended for the May 1-May 30 period because the British air carrier submitted false information to the Canadian transport commission more than two years ago, the commission announced Tuesday.

A commission spokesman said the suspension applies to business originating in Canada in that period.

Canadian travellers returning from trips which began in Canada in April will not be affected, the spokesman said. The suspension will not affect British travellers coming to Canada from Britain in May.

Laker had planned 28 flights originating in Canada in May, the commission spokesman said.

The commission said in a ruling that it has been seeking information from Laker since July 31, 1973, to explain documents the British carrier submitted for a Toronto-to-Prestwick, Scotland, flight that day. A reply finally came last December.

In a November decision asking Laker to give reasons why its licence should not be suspended, the commission said Laker filed false information for the advanced booking charter flight to Prestwick.

The air carrier had submitted a list containing names of at least 26 persons who had not boarded the flight but had gone on another Laker flight in May, the commission said.

In fact, 87 persons who turned up for the flight were not on the original Laker list. These people were British residents who were returning to Britain on Laker because another British carrier that was responsible for them defaulted.

Under charter rules, Laker was supposed to file a final list of passengers who were to board the aircraft 30 days before the flight.

AN X-RATED MOVIE ALL ABOUT MOTHS

Warning — completely concerned with sex.

That would probably be the comment of B.C.'s film classification director if he viewed an experiment under way at the Pacific Forestry Research entre on Burnside Road.

Two sneaky scientists there are doing their darnedest to inflame the desires of amorous moths and generally throw them into a state of lustful confusion.

Scottish-born chemist Dr. Iain Weatherston and entomologist Alan Hedlin say if their efforts are successful it may be possible to control an insect pest which sometimes comes close to wiping out seed crops in B.C.'s Douglas fir and spruce tree orchards.

The program could also have much wider application in pest control relating to trees and food crops.

Researchers at the centre have experimented with synthetic chemical attactants in the past in an effort to control the bark beetle.

Hedlin said the Douglas fir cone moth and the spruce cone worm moth somethimes cause losses as high as 90 per cent in tree orchards where seed is grown for the forest industry.

"The damage varies with the location," he said. "It's a major problem."

He explained the moth lays eggs on the developing cone in spring. When they hatch, the larvae eat and work themselves into the centre of the cone and a year later emerge from it as moths.

"In nature the moth is not a problem," he said. "Trees growing in their natural environment gorw enough seed for themselves and for the insects."

Weatherston's part in the project is to extract from the moth its sex attractant or pheromone.

Set attractants are chemicals produced by one sex to attract the other for mating. In moths the phermone is usaually produced by the female.

"Once we have determined the chemical structure of the sex attractants, we can produce it synthetically," said the 39-year-old chemist. "We can use the chemical to trap moths or to throw them into utter confusion."

Fir cones destroyed by moth larvae

He explained minute quantities of the sex attractant would be placed in containers lined with a sticky substance. The containers would be installed in or around the orchard, depending on whether the insects are already among the trees are migrating from an outside source. The moths would be attracted by the chemical and trapped inside.

Another method would be to spray the orchard with the sex attractant which would confuse the moths. They wouldn't know. Who's who and what's what.

Weatherston said the material is considered non-polluting because it is a natural product.

Weatherston, who studied at the University of Strathclyde in Glasgow, and the University of Wales, lectured at the University of Sheffield before coming to Canada in 1967.

He is on loan from the Insect Pathology Research Institute, Canadian Forest Service, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

He's quite confident the experiment will work.

"We will know in about two weeks," he said.

And to prove his point, he placed a bit of chemical in a glass jar and added some moths.

It was evident the moths were going berserk. The males didn't know the females, and vice versa. All was confusion.

It's Hard Labor, Studies in Cuba

By JIM POLING

HAVANA (CP) — The door to the side room of an ancient cigar factory had been left open and an inquisitive visitor stepped inside.

"What's this, child labor?" he asked with surprise as he studied a small knot of children preparing cigar boxes for export. "No!" exclaimed a Cuban tobacco official. "It's part of our education system. They are helping and learning."

The children, elementary school students about nine to 11 years old, were living examples of the unique Cuban educational system of combining studies with physical work.

The system, started in 1967, applies to all schools, including the island's four universities. Younger children do simple factory chores, but those in secondary schools are shipped to the country for 30 to 45 days every year. There they study four hours a day and work another four, harvesting sugar cane and coffee, or performing other farm tasks.

The Cubans say the idea is to produce well-rounded citizens — in other words, no egg-heads incapable of manual labor. But the system also provides extra hands as an economy that urgently needs more production.

Says Premier Fidel Castro: "This helps to temper them from early childhood in the habits of creative work, without running the risk of possible deformation through the exclusive exercise of intellectual activity."

The study-work system in Cuba started with Jose Marti, the 1895 war-of-independence revolutionary, now revered as a patron saint. He preached that all students work one-half of each day in school and the other half in fields or factories so they would understnd the life of a worker.

One example of the system is found at Havana's 1,639-student U.S.S.R.-Cuba technical school, so named because the Soviet Union equipped the school and trained the instructors.

The students, mainly boys 14 to 17 years old, learn how to melt metal and to mould it into machinery parts. They are taught how to cast, weld, grind and to operate a lathe.

Girls work in laboratories, learning to operate testing equipment for metals and machinery parts.

The parts, produced while learning, are sent to factories that make machinery. The students themselves spend part of their time working inside the factories.

The school also teaches language, culture, sports, political philosophy and ordinary school subjects.

Those who study for two years become what are called general workers for the factories, while four-year students become skilled technicians. All are guaranteed factory jobs on graduation.

At University of Havana, there are 54,000 students this year. Full-time students study four hours a day, six days a week and work another four hours daily in fields, factories or at jobs related to their future careers.

Many older students fill their work requirement by teaching, to offset the teacher shortage created when hundreds of thousands of Cubans emigrated after the 1959 revolution.

This commitment to working for the good of the country remains after graduation. Graduates must serve anywhere in Cuba for three years, then are allowed to return home to continue their careers.

He 'Sees' Through You

CHICAGO (UPI) — Nick Pomaro isn't fooled by appearances.

Blind since the first grade, Pamaro, 38, has learned to develop his remaining senses to judge people.

Judging character is part of his job as an assistant state's attorney prosecuting criminal cases in Chicago's northwest suburbs.

"You compensate for what you don't have," he said. "I gain more from inflections from voices, what people say and the way people say it.

"I think I'm a pretty good judge of character . . . picking out genuine people from the phonies. I may have a little better insight because I'm blind, because I don't have the visual things to distract me from making that determination."

Pomaro said he can do anything any other lawyer can do, "but maybe my way of doing it is a little different."

Like any other lawyer, Pomaro prepares notes to use in court — only his are in braille. "That's one method of adapting," he said.

Before handling a jury trial case, Pomaro learns the layout of the courtroom and tries to build up a rapport with the jurors so he will later feel confident standing before them.

"During jury selection — that's when I try to get them to know me and then I get to know them" he said. "I try to talk to them as people. Then I don't think they think of me as 'that blind person,' they think of me as a lawyer."

Pomaro's wife, Jean, helps out at their Arlington Heights home by reading him cases and law books. They have six children, ranging from 6 to 16.

The main problem Pomaro said he has encountered in life is "the reluctance of people to give you a chance in whatever way it may be.

"I had to fight to become a lawyer, I had to fight to get my job, I had to fight to get into court. Every step along the way, you have to prove yourself.

"What choice do I have? You keep going or you give up and fail. And I don't want to fail, so I just keep going.

"People, in their first encounter with me, they think of me as a blind person. After a while I like to think they forget about part of it, and think of me as a man — that's what I strive for in my personal relationships with people and with the jury."

PEPIN APOLOGIZES

OTTAWA (CP) — Anti-inflation Board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin apologized Tuesday for making a partisan remark about Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield on a weekend radio program.

During a luncheon speech to about 500 chartered accountants, Pepin said he broke a "self-imposed rule of non-partisanship . . . in a moment of distraction" and he now apologized to Stanfield. "I promise I won't do it again if I can help it."

Stanfield sent a letter to Pepin Monday, accusing him of making partisan and snide remarks Sunday on a CBC radio program.

Pepin had noted on the radio show that the anti-inflation program did not include a freeze on wages and prices as proposed by Stanfield during the 1974 election campaign. He then added: "Before he changed his mind for other reasons."

Stanfield characterized the comment about chaning his mind as snide.

In making the apology, Pepin indicated the reference was to Stanfield voting against the anti-inflation legislation on third reading in the Commons.

Stanfield and the Conservatives supported the legislation in principle but voted against it at one point because they felt the three-year duration of the program was too long. The Conservatives had attempted to amend the legislation to limit the program to 18 months, but this was refused by the Liberal government.

Canada 'Uninformed' On World Poverty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadians are not adequately informed about the dimensions of global poverty and the solutions offered to it, three federal members of Parliament have concluded after a 10-day cross-country tour.

At a news conference Tuesday, Toronto MP Andrew Brewin (NDP — Greenwood) said Canadians must become aware of the United Nations policy on the new international economic order is to mobilzie the world to deal with the basic problems of food, housing, education and other things that are essential to life," Brewin said.

"We've got to change our trade structures, we've got to pay more for some commodities, we've got to revise our monetary systems, we've got to revise our technology."

The committee said it was shocked by the lack of knowledge about new measures being taken by both the UN and the Canadian government to get at the root of the problem. It blamed the media for not making the information available.

The committee, which spoke to and met with groups in eight cities, recommended a government and media publicity program for the federal five-year Canadian stragegy plan, which has been approved by the cabinet, to implement the philosophy.

"There is in this country today a low level of information and understanding of the realities that cause global poverty, and of the solutions offered by the new economic order and the Canadian strategy plan," said Douglas Roche (PC — Edmonton-Strathcona.)

"We are convinced there will not be much Canadian progress until the level of information comes up much more, stimulating more debate, in orderto have the policies of the government translated into action. The Canadian strategy already published is a decade ahead of Canadian public opinion today."

Dr. Irenee Pelletier (L — Sherbrooke) called the UN economic policy "one of the most important developments in the international scene in the past decade."

Tre committee said that Canada should import more manufactured goods from developing nations and be willing to pay more for imported commodities.

New Era In U.S. Relations

WASHINGTON (FP) — Recent strains between Canada and the U.S. signal a new era in relations between the two countries, says a joint committee which today announced it was beginning a compreshensive study of the problems.

The study program will be conducted by the Canadian-American Committee, a private organization comprising leading business, labor and professional executives.

"The initiation of the program coincides with a spreading public recognition of a new and more problematic era in Canadian-American relations," the committee co-chairmen, Richard Schmeelk of New York and Robert MacIntosh of Toronto, said in a prepared statement.

"The strains of the new relationship surfaced recently with a warning of bilateral problems by the departing American ambassador to Canada and a sharp response by Prime Minister Trudeau," they added.

The committee has set up a team of researchers in both countries to investigate economic, social and political issues and to suggest policy options to deal with the most crucial ones.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Twenty-seven-year-old Alan Alexander George, no fixed address, was sentenced to three months in jail after being found guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday of theft by conversion.

Prosecutor Scott Marshall said George made an agreement to rent a trailer in Colwood between April 3 and June 21 last year. However, his cheque bounced and when the trailer had not been returned by July 7 its owner went to police.

Marshall told Judge Blake Allan that George was on probation at the time of the offence.

Robert Patrick Murphy, 36, address unavailable, was placed on eight months probation after pleading guilty to wilful damage.

The charge stemmed from an incident last March 20 when he entered his former girl-friend's apartment and cut up a number of her garments.

The woman said 51 items were destroyed and estimated the total damage at $758, a figure which Murphy contested.

Defence lawyer Rodney Smith said the charge was not laid by the woman until Sept. 22 and intimated it was "'an act of vindictivness arising out of highly emotional behavior between the two of them."

He said Murphy's action was an example of "his Irish temper getting the best of him."

Allan ordered the accused to pay the woman $350.

Conviction of impaired driving resulted in two men receiving jail sentences and one other a fine.

Judge Harold Alder sentenced Ray Garnet Furber, 59, of 2909 Leigh, to 14 days after finding him guilty. Thomas Viney Bowers, 55, of 3244 Shelley, pleaded guilty and received 20 days.

Both sentences will be served on an intermittent basis—on consecutive weekends. In addition each man was placed on six months probation and ordered to attend the impaired drivers' course.

Donald Herst McCreesh, 47, of 910 Claremont, was fined $350 and prohibited from driving for four months after pleading guilty.

A trip to the hospital last December inadvertently led to a trip to court for Russell William Griese, 28, of 110 Menzies.

Griese was admitted Dec. 17 to Victoria General Hospital for treatment of a drug overdose, and while there staff, checking through his clothing, discovered a single marijuana cigarette in a pocket.

When asked at the time whether the cigarette was his, he replied: "If you found it in my pocket then I guess it's mine."

On Tuesday he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. Allan fined him $75.

Griese explained to the judge he had taken some prescription drugs and alcohol early Dec. 17 and did not think the mixture would affect him.

"But," he said, "it did."

A rare conditional discharge was granted a 55-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to shoplifting.

Margaret Edna George, of 1375 Craigflower, was charged Dec. 13 after security staff at Woolco spotted her take two housecoats and one blouse and leave the store without paying. The items were worth $59.66.

Her lawyer asked Allan to suspend sentence because Mrs. George, a widow and mother of six grown-up children, had scant means of support.

"I think I'm going to do more than that," Allan responded.

Although he was "not very generous with handing down conditional discharges," this case proved an exception to the norm, the judge said.

The condition of the discharge is Mrs. George must serve three months unsupervised probation.

The judge, however, imposed a $100 fine on Gertrud Gmainer, 42, of 1424 Begbie who pleaded guilty to stealing $26.85 worth of goods from Zellers Dec. 5.

William Joseph Carnegie, 20, of 905 Bray, was fined $100 for car theft.

He had pleaded guilty to the charge which stemmed from an incident Jan. 2. At the time of his arrest Carnegie told police he had taken the car to drive to his parents' home in Brentwood. The car was not damaged.

In addition to the fine, Allan placed Carnegie on six months probation and ordered him to attend the Metchosin weekend camp for young adult offenders.

Memorable meal at moderate cost features shrimp crepes

Shrimp Crepes Are Tasty

By MARY MOORE

An economist friend of my sisters' and his wife were invited to my house for dinner. I had not met them but I looked forward to their arrival for they are determined to eat nutritionally and as economically as our inflated economy will allow.

This dinner was a challenge to me.

The menu was Shrimp Crepes (see below); Vegetable Threesome with Drawn Butter Sauce (see in near future); Waldorf Salad; Sesame Wheat Sticks (see in near future); Baked Bananas (see in near future).

I want to give you the recipe for the Shrimp Crepes today for they stole the show and cost around $3.00.

SHRIMP CREPES

Crepes:
3 eggs
10 tbsp. all-purpose flour (½ c. plus 2 tbsp.)
¼ tsp salt
1½ c. milk

Filling:
two 7-0z. cans small shrimp (drained weight 4½ oz.; reserve ¼ c. brine)
one 4-oz. can salmon
1 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. chopped onion
½ tsp. curry powder
½ tsp. M.S.G. (accent)
¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ c. white wine

Sauce:
2½ tbsp. butter
5 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
1 c. milk

Crepes may be made well in advance. You need a small frying pan (called "crepe" pan) 5½" in diameter at bottom.

To make Crepes combine eggs, flour, salt and milk and beat until perfectly smooth. Let stand 30 minutes. Melt ½ tsp. butter in bottom of frying pan to coat. Use ¼ cup measuring cup as your measure and dip a scant measure into pan over medium heat. Tip pan to coat bottom. Turn over when top is dry. Cook other side until pale gold. Transfer to large holding plate. Continue until all batter is cooked. I had 14 crepes. If you are unflappable you can work in two small pans at a time but you must concentrate. If crepes are made in advance cover and store in refrigerator.

To make Filling drain shrimp, reserve ¼ c. brine and combine shrimp in a medium pot with the salmon, butter, onion, curry powder, M.S.G., Worchestershire sauce and wine. Gently heat for 5 minutes.

To make Sauce blend butter, flour and salt then stir in milk and shrimp brine until very thick. Add ONE CUP of this sauce to shrimp mixture and stir in to blend. Reserve remaining ¼ cup sauce. Cool shrimp mixture to room temperature.

Working directly into a large shallow baking dish on which you are going to bake and serve the crepes. (I used a corningware well-and-tree platter 16x10") place one crepe at one end and spoon about 3 tbsp. filling onto centre. Fold flaps over to enclose. Carefully turn over so opening is on bottom. Neatness is important. Line up the filled crepes touching. You will have two parallel rows of 7 each. Spread over all a mixture of the ¼ c. reserved sauce, ¼ c. genuine mayonnaise and 2 tbsp. milk. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 15 minutes or until bubbly and golden. Serve at once. Pronounced "fantastic!"

Gourmet cooks can believe me — these will be a milestone in your cooking career.

Thawed Meat Carries Label

Consumers have been seeing the label "previously frozen" in supermarkets for a year now. The labelling, required under federal food and drug regulations, applies to all unprocessed meat, fish or poultry which have been frozen then thawed for resale.

Sometimes only part of a food may have been frozen and thawed prior to sale. For example, ground beef may be made of partially thawed boneless beef and fresh trimmings. In this case, the words "made from fresh and frozen portions" should appear either on the food product label or on a sign adjacent to the food.

The purpose of the label is to alert consumers that these products were previously frozen or made in part from frozen products and are not "fresh" in the usual sense. This does not imply that "previously frozen" means inferior in quality. In the case of ground beef, it's an advantage to use partially frozen meat as it keeps meat cool during handling and grinding.

Thawed meat should be kept under refrigeration and used within a couple of days. If it is necessary to refreeze the meat, this should be done immediately after purchase. Cooking destroys harmful bacteria. Cooked meat may be refrozen and stored for approximately two months. Any meat with an off-odour should be discarded.

When shopping for meat, it's wise to pick up "previously frozen" foods last to avoid having them sit at room temperature. Fresh or thawed meat, fish and poultry are highly perishable and should be kept refrigerated.

HYPERACTIVITY, DIET LINKED

NEW YAORK — A federal interagency group set up to study the relationship between hyperactivity in children and their consumption of artificial food colors and flavors has found the available evidence inconclusive but "sufficient to merit further investigation."

As a result, several federal agencies, including the National Institutes of Education and Health and the Food and Drug Administration, have committed themselves to the financing of new tests of a died for hyperkinetic children. The diet was developed by Dr. Ben F. Feingold of the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Centre in San Francisco.

Since 1973 Feingold has treated hundreds of children suffering from hyperactivity and learning disorders with a diet containing no synthetic flavors or colors. It is his contention that these substances can trigger the disorders.

He has reported that within a month of being placed on the diet, about 50 per cent of the children return to normal or near-normal behavior and can stop taking the powerful tranquilizers and amphetamine stimulants that had been used to control them.

"I certainly do consider this a victory," said Feingold from his home in San Francisco. "From a clinical standpoint, my hypothesis is definitely proved by the changes in the children. But it would be politically impossible for them (the interagency group) to come out and say that — if they did it would raise havoc.

"But the very fact that they are funding the research means they believe that something in the (ordinary) diet is causing the hyperkinesis, and that something is now what we have to find."

Feingold said he believed it would take 25 to 50 years of research to identify the chemical compound or compounds that may be to blame.

The interagency group reviewed all the available studies on the relationship of diet to hyperkinesis and found them all wanting in some respect. It said that future studies should attempt to separate changes resulting from three different aspects of being placed on the Feingold diet: general nutritional changes, altered social interactions, and elimination of artificial food flavors and colors.

"Only when the children, parents and evaluators of behavioral changes are unaware of which diet is being ingested by the children studied can biases based on hope and expectations in behavior be avoided," the group said in its report.

Beef, Pork Prices Likely To Be Steady

Consumers can expect larger supplies of beef, pork and poultry, particularly broiler chickens and turkey during 1976, according to Agriculture Canada economists.

Stocks of chicken are lower than a year ago and there has been an increased demand due to the higher pork prices.

Beef and poultry prices are expected to remain relatively steady during the year while pork prices are expected to gradually decrease by next fall. Retail prices for Canadian lamb will remain high as supplies continue to decline.

Egg supplies should be in line with consumer demand. Producer prices are set by CEMA (Canadian Egg Marketing Agency) and are geared to production costs.

Retail prices for fluid milk should not increase much during '76 since milk production is on the upswing. Sales of both fluid milk and cream should increase.

Butter stocks will be less than last year but will be adequate to meet consumer demand.

Butter stocks will be less than last year but will be adequate to meet consumer demand.

Large stocks of skim milk powder are available at economical prices.

Consumer demand for cheddar and Canadian-made variety cheeses and ice cream is expected to increase and more will be available.

Lower price tags are predicted on stored apples, and pears because of above-average crops in 1975. Prices for canned tender fruits (apricots, cherries, peaches, pears and plums) should also be lower. However, fresh and processed berries will probably cost more.

Because of the lower potato production prices will be higher this year for both table and processed potatoes than a year ago.

Wholesale prices for fresh vegetables will probably be similar to those of last year with seasonal price increases expected for all storage vegetables.

Canadian honey production increased in 1975 and although retail prices are generally firm, some price specials are occuring.

Short Cuts to Luscious Pies

By TINY BENNETT

The all-time favorite dessert of Canada is pie.

It's my favorite and while we are not big on desserts at home, every now and then I really enjoy creating all kinds of baked goodies — pies, tarts and flans.

Different parts of Canada have variations on the above names, so I'd better explain what I mean by these terms.

PIES to me are baked pastry dishes with single or double crusts in which fruits, pumpkin and even sweet potato are cooked right along with the pastry.

TARTS, either large or puck-size, are open-faced baked goods, filled with jam or custard, baked together with the pastry BUT can also be baked blind and later filled with sweet materials.

My version of the FLAN is a deeper form of single crust pie baked blind, allowed to cool and then filled with fruit that is prepared with gelatine or packaged jellies, chilled until firm and then decorated with whipped cream.

However, only the description is complicated and pies, tarts and flans are excellent desserts that are reasonable in cost and very simple to make once a basic pastry mixture has been mastered.

My own long established flaky pastry recipe came right off the back of a packet of Maple Leaf, Tenderflake lard; readers who don't use pork products can simply substitute pure vegetable shortening.

BASIC PIE PASTRY

You will Need:
5 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons salt
1 Pound lard or shortening
1 tablespoon white vinegar
1 egg, beaten, and water to mix

Sift together salt and flour, then cut in the lard with two knives, until you reach a coarse meal texture, with still a few lumps remaining. In your measuing cup, beat the egg, add the vinegar and bring it up to one cup with cold water.

Add this mixture slowly to the bowl, stirring steadily with a fork, gather it into a ball, wrap and freeze or refrigerate until ready to use. This yields three double crust nine-inch pie shells, or six nine-inch tarts, or four flans. I've never counted how many tartlets it produces but it's enough to satisfy even the Jack of Hearts.

By TINY BENNETT

This system is excellent for families or entertaining but is a bit of a hassle for beginner homemakers or those with limited time and refrigerator or cooking space. And for these folks I'd suggest a few early adventures into this game via the medium of the pre-prepared uncooked and frozen pie and tart shells available in grocery stores.

Normally I am opposed to an indulgence in "convenience" foods as they are often expensive but the pie and tart shells are pretty cheap at 72 cents for two shells — nine inchers, complete with foil platters and a shaped fitted unit for baking blind; the little tart shells come in a dozen pack for 69 cents.

Since I am well aware the experineced piemaker needs no instructions from me, let's deal with the excellent pre-prepared frozen shells that can so beautifully introduce the inexperienced to the joy of home-baked pies and tarts.

As part of my kitchen work in preparing this article, I got up at 6 a.m. to prepare a batch of baked goods before my working wife and student daughter got up and began to clamor for their breakfasts.

Using brought frozen shells, canned fruit and pumpkin, plus a jar of my own home-made strawberry jam, I finished off four open-faced nine-inch pie tarts and two dozen raspberry tartlets before 7 a.m. And it is no sweat at all to turn out a couple of dozen jam tarts in 30 minutes from start to finish. Or a luscious pumpkin pie in 40 minutes from the start.

The secret of this time-saving, inexpensive method of getting fresh baked goodies, lies in combining the convenience of the frozen shells with the perfectly balanced canned pie fillings stocked by all groceries.

To make, one simply opens a can of fruit filling, takes the shell from the freezer — at the last minute, pour the fruit carefully into the centre of the shell, smooth and pop into a pre-heated oven and bake until the crust is richly browned and the fruit has blended flavor into the crust.

Pumpkin pie filling calls for the addition of milk and a beaten egg or you can use either cream or canned evaporated milk for a richer mix. Baking temperatures and cooking times vary from one product to another but are plainly printed as a guide. Use the stated temperature and time but check; one of my ovens is slow and I find I must increase the time by almost a third. So wait until the pastry is a nice brown

The pie or tarts should be allowed to cool and set and then can be fancied up with wipped cream or one of the canned cream whips available.

One of the delights of this careful use of "convenience" food items is that it is a game anybody can play. If a non-cooking member of the household is won't to beef he or she doesn't get enough of his or her favorite pies, buy them the fixings and point out the stove.

Tuna-Noodle Casserole

1 pkg. (4 serving size) Noodles Romanoff
1 can cream of asparagus soup
2 7-oz. cans Clover Leaf Chunk Light Tuna, drained
1 10-oz. pkg. frozen chopped broccoli
½ cup pitted ripe olives, cut in wedges

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Prepare Noodles Romanoff as directed on package, except use ½ cup milk. Stir in soup, chunks of tuna, broccoli and olives. Pour into 2 quart casserole. Cover and bake 35 to 40 minutes, or until broccoli is tender.

Mandarin Shrimp

½ pkg. 26-oz. Chinese mixed vegetables — fresh
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. sweet basil
2 cans 4½-oz. each Clover Leaf Large or Medium Shrimp
Mandarin Sauce — below

Stir-fry vegetables in 1 tbsp. oil for 5 minutes. Add salt, pepper, sweet basil and 1 tbsp. water. Cover for 5 minutes. Add rinsed and drained shrimp carefully to prevent breaking apart. Pour Sweet and Sour Mandarin Sauce over and serve on rice.

Savory summer sausage quiche

Delicate Blend of Flavor Makes an Elegant Quiche

Elegant Quiche

Whether served as individual tarts, or as a pie, this quiche is a traditionally elegant dish that graces any table. This delicate blend of summer sausage, cheese and custard will make you a proud hostess.

Custard:
4 eggs
1 pint milk or half and half
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspon pepper

Dough:
2 cups flour
6-oz. cream cheese
2 egg yokes
½ pound butter

Filling:
1-oz. Parmesan cheese
2-oz. Swiss cheese (large grated)
3-oz. onion
6-oz. summer sausage

Mix all ingredients for dough. Place in eight tartlet shells or one pie pan and prebake at 350 degrees for 10-12 minutes; note: place another pie pan on top so as to hold shape of crust.

Dice onion and sausage; grate cheese. Saute onions and sausage. Place onions, sausage and cheese in pie crust. Cover with custard.

Bake at 350 degrees 12-15 minutes or until a toothpick can be inserted and it comes out clean. Slice and serve. Serves eight.

If you have indulged in too many rich foods during the holidays, you may be afraid of having gained weight.

Did you know that one out of six Canadian men and one of four Canadian women are overweight? Studies have shown that these people run a greater risk of serious illness than those with normal weight.

The 32-page booklet "Four Steps To Weight Control" ("La Regulation de poids en Quatre Points") shows you how to lose weight without going hungry.

The first step the booklet suggests is to see your doctor. He will tell you how much you ought to lose. Secondly, write down for three days exactly what you eat. This list will help your doctor determine your eating problem.

Thirdly, you will have to retrain your eating habits and avoid foods which are high in calories. Weigh yourself once a week and keep a record of your weight.

The booklet also contains sample menus for restricted calorie diets and a calorie table for most common foods.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER

Newborn babies are helpless because of more reasons than simply that of size and physical weakness. They are born with sterile gastrointestinal tracts, which means that they lack a population of infection-fighting bacteria, and it takes them a few weeks of life before they can build up their own defenses against infectious disease.

In the meantime, they are protected by the antibodies passed on by their mothers before birth. These immune factors against such diseases as scarlet fever, diptheria and measles are transferred across the placenta from mother to unborn child. And although we have known for some time that mother's milk also contains various protective factors, it had been thought that they were of lesser importance.

New research findings however, indicate that breast milk, particularly colostrum — the first milk to be secreted — plays a protective role that is as important as that of the placenta.

Premature infants who are breast-fed have been found to have fewer severe infections and a lower death rate than premature babies who are fed a formula. Full-term infants who are breast-fed have fewer gastro-intestinal, urinary tract and respiratory infections. Moreover, mother's milk contains a "bifidus factor," which promotes growth and helps the baby to develop its own infection-fighting bacteria.

The proteins in mother's milk are perfectly suited to the needs of a human body, and several are also potent virus fighters.

Colostrum, in particular, is especially rich in immunoglobulins, which are antibodies that protect against polio viruses and various bacteria.

Recently, a group of researchers in Sweden fed healthy women in their last weeks of pregnancy a "cocktail" of easily traceable but harmless bacteria. Within a week, antibodies to those bacteria began to appear in the women's breast milk. Apparently, those antibody-producing cells became sensitized to the bacteria in the intestinal tract, and then "homed" directly to the breast, where colostric cells produced the immunoglobulins.

Colostrum also contains white cells in as great a concentration as is found in blood. New research indicates that these cells are fully effective in fighting infection, notably necrotizing entercolitis, a widespread infection of the intestines that is often deadly to infants, especially those given blood transfusions.

In short, while it has always been obvious that human milk provides the ideal nutrition for human babies, it is becoming obvious that the swing back to breast feeding is also good for the baby's general health.

WHAT MAKES CHILDREN LOVE—OR HATE—ATHLETICS?

By ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — A University of Ottawa researcher has questioned the value of athletic competition for most youngsters.

Terry Orlick says: "We used to think that sport was automatically good for all kids to build character. But research shows that it isn't automatically good. It can have positive or negative influences on children.

"The negative feelings can be so strong as to turn youngsters off sports."

Surveys conducted by Orlick and some of his students reveal children as young as eight and nine have quit sports. Many of these playing field dropouts cite pressure and a lack of fun and playing time as the main reasons for not wanting to return.

Orlick is a sports psychologist with the University of Ottawa physical education department. He has been studying the attitude of children in sports, especially those who lose interest.

His work has resulted in a book, Every Child Can Win, written with Cal Botterill of University of Alberta. It is directed toward parents and coaches to help them understand youngsters' expectations in sports.

It calls for a shift to games that emphasize co-operation rather than competition to give children a chance to gain from sports more than the feeling that winning is everything.

His studies have alarmed him because of the rate children quit sports. He thinks it is largely because sports do not fulfil the needs of most youngsters.

Competition may be satisfactory or enjoyable for highly-skilled and motivated youngsters but too often, for most of the others, it is just a way of being weeded out and dumped aside, left feeling inadequate and somehow inferior, Orlick says.

But with co-operative games, "everyone would be involved."

Youngsters usually become involved in sports with the encouragement of their parents, who hope to see their offspring learn the basics of games and sportsmanship, have fun and fellowship and learn to get along with other children.

"What parents want and what kids get in the sport environment are often contradictory," Orlick says.

He thinks most amateur sports have become production lines geared to turn out athletes ready for professional competition. But "sports and recreation should offer something different than the concern with performance that dominates us in work and school."

Games that stress working together more than winning had additional potential for youngsters. Besides being more fun, they would teach co-operation, an important factor to Orlick.

"Co-operation is an essential part of our future in terms of the quality of our lives. We are going to have to be more concerned with other peoples' interests and perspectives, to learn to co-operate more."

Orlick knows both sides of the sports debate. he says he has "had the goodies" — a gymnastics scholarship to an American university. But his experience working with children at summer camps prompted him to resume his studies of children when he went to University of Alberta for his doctorate.

Besides the book, Orlick has written several papers on the negative forces of sport for children.

Parsnip's Fine Flavor Fades as in Sprouts

HILDA BEASTALL

Parsnips are just one of several vegetables that remain in the Victoria home gardens and allotments during winter, to be dug up or pulled just when we need them. There is no doubt about their delicate flavor and digestibility under these conditions.

This column today is particularly to remind gardeners to use their parsnips now before new growth at the tops makes headway in mild weather. With new green growth, the chemistry of the parsnip (and other root vegetables too) changes, resulting in not only loss of fine flavor but also in upsetting digestion for a number of people. So just don't leave your parsnips in the ground to sprout new tops. Lift them now; store in a cold place; use them this month before the chemical changes occur.

Boiled in water, parsnips lose their natural sugars and quickly become waterlogged and mushy. Since they cook quickly they can be cut into small pieces for cooking in an even shorter period — usually a few minutes. Small parsnips should be cooked whole.

If the core is found to be hard, cut it out to cook separately for a few minutes before adding the softer outer parts.

Combined with kale, spinach, broccoli or carrots for vitamin A in the same meal, parsnips add plenty of useful minerals and a small quantity of vitamin C; they have no vitamin A of their own. Small amounts of the B complex are present, so that as a vegetable used as part of a complete meal, parsnips have a useful purpose.

To prepare parsnips for cooking, wash thoroughly, using a brush if necessary to clean the rough skin. Do not soak in water, and do not peel unless the skins have been proven tough.

Dry before cutting and cooking.

SAUTEED PARSNIPS

4 cups ¼-inch circles parsnip
1½ Tbsp soft margarine
¼ tsp salt
¼ tsp dark molasses

Add parsnip circles to hot margarine in skillet. Stir and cover. Bring to heat quickly, then lower to slow simmer for 10 to 12 minutes until barely fork tender. Stir gently to prevent scorching but let brown slightly. Sprinkle with salt.

If desired add molasses before serving and stir again.

If molasses not used, sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and paprika. Serves 4 with a meal.

Baked Parsnips: when oven is in use, parsnips can be baked at moderate heat 177 deg. C. in a preheated covered casserole, greased to prevent sticking. Cut clean, unpeeled parsnips either into julienne sticks or ¼-inch circles. Proportions for 4 servings: 4 cups prepared parsnip, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon hot water.

Bake at 177 deg. C. for 15 minutes or until almost fork tender.

Parsnips quickly cooked in a covered frypan or skillet make a savory dish to serve with cold meat or with a hearty salad.

PAN-COOKED PARSNIPS

4 cups diced parsnips
1 Tbsp onion sliced
3 Tbsp soft margarine
1½ cups tomato juice or pulp
¼ cup dry wholewheat bread
½ tsp salt
¼ tsp fresh basil
1 Tbsp chopped parsley or kale
2 Tbsp soy flour
2 tsp brewer's yeast
1 tsp dark molasses

Melt margarine in frypan or skillet. Add onion and cook until limp. Add diced parsnips. Cover and bring back to heat, then reduce to slow simmer to cook about 12 minutes until almost tender.

Add tomato juice or pulped canned tomato; return to slow simmer.

Stir in breadcrumbs (include crust) and all other ingredients, stirring as each is added; cook gently one minute.

The soy flour and brewer's yeast add many nutrients to make this dish a completely nourishing lunch or supper when served on a warm whole wheat bun with salad and fruit. Serves 4.

Another oven dish to cook when other baking is being done, will give you parsnips reminding you of sweet potatoes, for the natural sugars in this winter vegetable combine with all sorts of things.

BAKED PARSNIPS WITH APPLE

4 cups diced parsnips
1 cup diced apple
¼ cup sliced onion
¼ tsp ginger, powdered
1 Tbsp hot water

Grease a covered casserole; add and mix all ingredients. Pour hot water over top.

Heat through on top of stove before putting into a moderate oven at 177 deg. C. to cook for about 30 minutes, covered.

Test for near fork tenderness of parsnips and apple; sprinkle with grated Cheddar or Parmesan cheese. Return to oven until cheese melts. Serve with broocoli or kale.

The key to parsnip palatability is not cooking it in water to a pulp. Even though the cooking water is used for other dishes, the parsnip tastes of nothing and it has no texture.

With parsnips from the garden you can experiment first to find out whether the cores need that bit of extra cooking. If so, you can cook the cores separately in a little water as a dish sprinkled with cheese to serve with one of the others described here.

Before preparing parsnips, check the tops of each. If new green shoots are already showing, chop the roots into pieces and discard to the compost heap. Play safe; they are likely to be upsetting to someone in the family. While still in the dormant state with only the last year's leaves, parsnips make nourishing and tasty vegetable dishes.

dear abby

That's the Rub

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a masseur, and he has his own parlor Our problem is the growing number of women who find it impossible to come in for massages during Walter's regular working hours. To accommodate them, he stays evenings, which means Walter and his customer are there all alone.

One woman used to come in three times a week — always after hours — so I started going down there when she did, and she finally quit coming in for massages.

Walter became upset and said he doesn't want me coming down to his parlor at all because the word is getting around that he has a jealous wife — which is hurting his business.

I say he does well enough during the day hours and doesn't need to work evenings, too. Also, I've never know him to work overtime on a man or an elderly or obese woman — only young, good-looking ones.

Have I a right to be suspicious?

WALTER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes. But you can't be absolutely sure until you catch Walter rubbing one of his customers the wrong way.

DEAR ABBY: I am stationed in Seoul, Korea, and read your column in the Pacific Stars and Stripes.

My wife is back in the States. We've been married two years, but have spent only 10 months together because of my Army training and stationing in Korea.

My wife used to smoke before we were married, but I asked her to quit and she did.

She wrote to tell me she has started smoking again. She says it "relaxes" her and keeps her weight down. "Only half a pack a day," she claims, but I am very much upset because I hate that habit and don't want her to smoke at all.

As her husband, do I have the right to demand that she quit? My mother used to smoke over three packs a day, and you should have seen her when she got up in the morning. I don't want that to happen to my wife.

What should I do?

FAR FROM HOME

DEAR FAR: Don't make an issue of it in your letters. You'll only upset her and increase her need to "relax." When you get home, ASK her to please quit. But I warn you, unless she herself is motivated to quit, she probably won't.

Being a husband doesn't give you the "right" to demand anything except fidelity.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14-years-old and ashamed to admit it, but I still wet the bed.

When my friends ask me if I can spend the night with them, I make up an excuse like: "My mother won't let me."

Abby, I know it's a sin to lie, but I just can't tell them that I still wet the bed. Can you help me?

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: There are more kids your age who still wet the bed than you would believe, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

Ask your mom to get a "wet alarm." (It's advertised in leading mail-order catalogues — and it really works! After you've tried it, write again and tell me if it worked for you. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 and my wife is 24. It's Eldora's second marriage. She was married for eight years to a man who was 15 years older than she was, and they had one child.

Abby, I really love Eldora and her son, but we've been married only four months and she's left me five times! She stays away about a week each time. She packs up and says she's going to her mother's.

The last time she left, I found out she went back to her ex-husband.

When she came home, she told me they had lived as man and wife again, and she thinks she loves him more than me because he is the father of her child. Also, she says he is a much better lover than I am. (How is that for an insult?) On the other hand, she says he is a jealous man who treats her rough and likes to run with other women.

I love Eldora and would do anything to keep her home, but how can I arrange it? This running back and forth is no good. Please help me. Maybe I need someone to tell me to kick her fanny out for good. —TROUBLED IN N.J.

DEAR TROUBLED: Tell Eldora exactly how you feel about her off-again-on-again relationship with her 'ex." Insist on an "all-or-nothing" marriage. And if Eldora isn't willing to be a faithful wife to you, kick her fanny back to her "ex" with no regrets.

Was Rita Drunk or Sick?

LONDON — Her long, blonde hair dishevelled and, according to a fellow passenger, looking "very ill," actress Rita Hayworth had to be assisted off a jumbo jetliner on arrival from Los Angeles Tuesday.

News cameramen photographed her being helped down the back steps of the plane 30 minutes after it landed at Heathrow airport. Two uniformed airline employees supported her at each side.

The Daily Express quoted "an official" as saying Miss Hayworth "started shouting and waving her arms about. She did not want to leave the plane."

One report quoted a French woman passenger that "there was a bit of shouting going on and whether she was drunk or not we do not know. But she looked very ill."

Miss Hayworth, 57, and her five-member entourage eventually were driven from the plane to a reception suite normally used by visiting government heads and officials, and later she was taken to London, leaving her personal luggage at the airport.

The Express quoted Miss Hayworth's "private secretary" as saying "she did not drink on the plane . . . she is just exhausted."

The actress, who starred in Hollywood movies in the 1940s and 50s, had come to London for a television show.

Calif. Robbery Ring Was All in the Family

ORANGE, Calif.—Police say Yvonne McCaslin and Rico Wiley kept it "all in the family," running an armed robbery ring using their three children, two boys and a girl aged 12 to 17 and a 16-year-old friend.

The family is believed to be responsible for up to 20 recent holdups.

Police say the family used the same method of operation in all of the robberies. The woman and her 12-year-old son would walk into a store, pretending to look at merchandise, and then the father and three other children, armed with guns and wearing masks, would burst in and rob the place.

McCaslin, 38, and her common-law husband, 36, have been booked on suspicion of armed robbery along with their three children and the 16-year-old.

WAYNE

After 20 Years

LOS ANGELES — After 20 years, Laren Bacall and John Wayne are being reunited in a movie.

Miss Bacall will play the operator of a boarding house where Wayne, playing a terminally ill gunfighter, takes shelter in the Paramount western The Shootist. They last appeared together in Blood Alley at Warner Brothers in 1956.

James Stewart is playing a cameo role in the film, directed by Don Siegel. Also in the cast are Richard Boone, John Carradine and Ronnie Howard, star of television's Happ Days.

He Only Wanted To Get Home

NEW YORK — A 21-year-old Brooklyn man who said he was in a hurry to get home has been charged with trying to hijack a subway train at knifepoint.

Edwin Alma allegedly boarded the train and asked motorman William Mendell if the train went to Canarise. Mendel replied that it did, and said Alma put a knife next to his ribs and told him "don't stop until you get there."

LOS ANGELES — Velma Bailey Smith won a $650,000 malpractice judgment Tuesday against Dr. Victor Morhahn because a wayward needle interfers with her sex life, ruining her marriage. She sued the doctor, charging that during a biopsy on Nov. 7, 1971, he inserted a needle "some distance away" from the correct location and it broke. A piece of the needle is still lodged against her spine and cannot be removed, her lawyer said. During sex, hte movment of the needle near her spine causes her great pain, her lawyer argued, and she and her hasband have separated because of the problem.

LONDON — Julia Stonehouse, 25-year-old daughter of runaway labor MP John Stonehouse, was given a 12-month conditional discharge Tuesday for possessing marijuana.

LONDON — Former British foreign secretary Selwyn Lloyd announced Tuesday his forthcoming retirement as Speaker of the House of Commons. The 71-year-old Conservative, who also had been chancellor of the exchequer and defence minister during his political career, said he will relinquish his office Feb. 3. He has been Speaker since 1971.

WINNIPEG — D. M. Fraser, vice-chairman of the national Energy Board, has been admitted to hospital in critical condition, a spokesman for the Health Sciences Centre said Tuesday. The nature of his illness had not yet been determined.

SAN FRANCISCO Patricia Hearst allowed a prosecution psychiatrist she said drove her to hysteria to examine her a second time, only after he promised to aboide by "very stringent safeguards and guarantees," her lawyer says.

PITTSBURGH — An elderly woman was found frozen to death in her suburban home two weeks after her gas was turned off because she didn't pay her bill, the Allegheny County coroner's office says. Officials said the body of Sophia Easer, about 70, was found by police. She was on the floor covered with rags and a carpet, apparently in an attempt to escape subfreezing temperatures. A spokesman for the utility said the company had no way of knowing Miss Easer's age or whether she lived alone. "It's tragic, but what can you say."

SURPRISE, SURPRISE!

NAPLES, Fla. — Four months ago Henry Lacy's 82-year-old girlfriend told him he was "crazy" to undertake a cross-country bicycle trip from Long Beach, Calif., to Fort Myers, Fla., to surprise his only daughter.

Lacy, 72, remembered that remark when he arrived last week to find his daughter had moved and left no forwarding address.

"I wanted to surprise her, but it turned out she surprised me," he said.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In most situations, when your partner has bid a suit and you obtain the lead, you will play his suit. But, as with all principles, there are exceptions. The latter was the case in today's deal, which was played in a rubber-bridge game.

NORTH
♡ 1 0 9 5
◇ K 8 6
♣ Q 5 4

WEST
♠ 10 3
♡ A Q J 8 4

♣ A J 6

SOUTH
♡ K
◇ 1 0 7 4
♣ K 10 9 7 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡
2 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

West's four-heart bid — completely unjustified on his values— was made on the theory that the nonvulnerable opponents would sacrifice at four spaces. West turned out to be right.

A low club was played from dummy on the opening lead, and East likewise played low, South's nine-spot winning. Declarer then cashed the king, ace, and queen of trumps, gathering in the five outstanding pieces. Next came a low club, the board's queen being taken by East's ace. South's three remaining clubs had just become established as winners.

East now paused for reflection. First, East-West were not opening four-card major suits in either first or second position. Hence East knew that South had, at most, one heart (which figured to be the king, since if West had held either the A-K or the K-Q of hearts, he would have tended to lead a heart at trick one, instead of the club he had led). Consequently, East could gain nothing by leading a heart.

So East, by a process of elimination, led a diamond. West took his ace and returned the diamond queen, dummy's king taking the trick. It now became impossible for declarer to avoid losing another diamond, plus a heart. And so he went down a trick, losing two diamonds, a heart, and a club.

Had East played back a heart when he took his ace of clubs, South's king would have fallen to West's ace. But from here in all the defenders would make would be West's ace of diamonds, for no matter what West returned, South could now return to his own hand by ruffing a heart; and on his established clubs he could discard dummy's remaining heart and a diamond.

Thus, by thoughtful reasoning, East's nonreturn of partner's twice-bid heart suit enabled the defenders to emerge victorious.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
Astrological Forecast for Thursday, Jan. 22

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Friend aids in extricating you from what could be a red tape, legal tangle. Consolate — gather forces together. Highlight security. Deal with experienced, business person. Get property appraisal. Cancer, Capricorn might be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Basic issues can no longer be shunted aside, delayed or substituted. Face issues squarely, including health, employment, special services. Gemini, Sagittarius could figure prominently. Keep recent resolutions — for your own good!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Be "on the square." Means don't equivocate. Say what you mean — and mean it. Member of opposite sex may want to play word games. Don't compound the error. Be sure of sources, quotations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be ready for change of scenery, variety of experiences, messages which could lead to travel opportunities. Gemini, Virgo individuals are in picture. Money of partner or mate becomes major consideration.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on decisions — take time to be analytical. Impatient relative should be ignored. Be diplomatic, not weak. Travel plans are not set — long-range project requires review, especially where advertising or publishing is concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): See as is, not as you wish places and persons might be. Steer clear of wishful thinking, self-deception. Someone tries to get something for nothing — and you could be prime target. Know it and keep guard in ready position.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are able to overturn plans which were basically unfair. You gain support, are capable now of setting long-range policy. Member of opposite sex does care and makes no secret of it. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in important ways.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can learn, publish, interpret, gain respect for ability to interpolate and to reach understanding-in-depth. You close transaction. You gain added recognition. One who is selfish does about face and insists that you receive credit due. Accept!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get started in new direction. Welcome contacts, chances for added independence. Leo, Aquarius could be in picture. Accent on lovers' quarrels, creative endeavors, reconciliations, challenges and a renewal understanding of your own capabilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What appears a setback is merely a caution light. Get second wind. Review procedures. Cash flow is but temporarily impeded. You'll get news which renews faith. Older individual is not against you — you will know it and benefit from wise counsel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Light touch brings best results. Means go slow and easy. If you insist on forcing issues, you could be in for rude awakening. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles. Accent on plan which would enable you to be free of local restrictions. Message will be clarified!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may have to tear down for purpose of rebuilding. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpioare in picture. Accent on necessity to dig beneath surface indications. A mystery will be solved — you'll know where you stand, especially where money is concerned.

IF JAN. 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you never follow the crowd. You are a specialist, an individual, unique and incentive. You are unorthodox, intriqued with the unknown. Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. New project succeeds this year, with July your most significant month of 1976.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Today we have a very simple variation on the idea of our popular monthly number games. Try it, for fun!

You have the digits 3 4 7 8. Using all four, one of each, make an expression for the number 84.

Easy? Well, there's something more. You may use only one arithmetical sign or symbol, and once only. No words. Just that one sign or symbol, and the four digits.

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: Moon was 4227.

Rich Program For Stock Cars

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A Winners' Circle award, offering a total of $560,000 in prize money, has been established by the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing.

The award is to be divided among the top eight racing teams, based on performance in the previous year and a commitment to run the full 30-race schedule in the upcoming season.

Deadly Atherosclerosis Reversible, Study Shows

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A study has strongly suggested a major disease that blocks blood vessels and causes nearly 1,000,000 deaths a year is reversible, according to a Los Angeles physician.

It is the first time such clinical evidence has been found, although physicians have believed such things as exercise, diet, drugs and reduced smoking could lessen the danger from the disease, called atherosclerosis.

Dr. David H. Blankenhorn of the University of Southern California said a new technique for measuring the amount of fat buildup in blood vessels showed the disease regressed in one year in nine of the 40 patients in a study group.

"We have now studied more than 100 men and have learned that for some of them a one-year program of weight loss and exercise reduced vessel incrustations (buildup of fat which blocks the blood flow)," Blankenhorn said. "This is important because it points the way to preventive maintenance treatments for atherosclerosis which can be applied and evaluated for each individual's response before heart attack or stroke occurs."

The annual check on the other 60 patients from the study has not been completed, he added. In the group check, the disease worsened in 14 and there was no change in the other 17. Without treatment, the disease likely would have increased in nearly all, he suggested.

Blankenhorn told the American Heart Association science writers forum Tuesday the exact cause of the reversal of the disease in the nine patients was not known.

"I do feel confident in saying there was a change," he said, "but what caused the change I cannot be sure. We simply have a demonstration that it reversed."

Blankenhorn said it was the first time that anyone has been able to clinically show regression of the disease. He said animal studies showed the disease could be checked, but it had not been possible before to confirm the same for humans.

Death Dive Kills Husband As Wife Waits

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — Langue Ossandon was horrified when she saw a man leap to his death Tuesday from the 11th floor of a building here.

She did not join the crowd which gathered around the body because she was waiting for her husband.

When he failed to appear, she went closer and discovered the jumper had fallen on her husband, killing him.

Typhoid Outbreak Traced To New York City Restaurant

By BRIAN SULLIVAN

NEW YORK (AP) — The typhoid might have come from the salad dressing. Or maybe the popovers.

For the first time in 25 years, an outbreak of typhoid fever has been traced to one of New York City's 9,000 restaurants, and medical detectives say they might have found the food item that is guilty.

At least seven cases of typhoid have been connected with the restaurant, says Dr. Pascal James Imperato, deputy health commissioner for New York City. Normally, there are 30 to 40 typhoid cases reported annually in this city, and nearly all are contracted by individuals who had travelled to countries where the disease is still widespread.

The typhoid organism, salmonella typhi (50 types of them) is shed by the body and transmitted through feces or urine. A food handler who has the disease or who is a carrier can transmit it to a restaurant customer if proper sanitary procedures—handwashing, for example—are not carried out.

This medical mystery story began during the pre-Christmas period in Manhattan, when stores, theatres and restaurants were jammed with New Yorkers and visitors.

In Waltham, Mass., 38 members of a theatre group boarded a bus for New York and the Broadway theatre district. Four other members came to the city in two cars.

On Saturday night, Dec. 13, the only night they had dinner together, they gathered in mid-Manhattan at Patricia Murphy's Candlelight Restaurant.

The group was joined at the restaurant by a Waltham high school graduate who now is an actor in New York, appearing in the Broadway musical Shenandoah.

It was a busy night in the city and at Patricia Murphy's, which put on additional help that night. And apparently because it was so busy in the restaurant, the young people —high school students, college students, a few teachers—had to wait an hour to be served.

While they waited, they were served popovers, and some members of the group ate several. One of the theatregoers, a vegetarian, evidently because of the possibility that the popovers were made with animal fats, ate salad instead.

On the afternoon of Jan. 13, New York City health department officials were notified of a typhoid outbreak by Dr. Nicholas Fuimara, chief of the division of communicable diseases for the Massachusetts department of health. New England doctors had interviewed people ill with typhoid, all members of the theatre party, and discovered a New York connection.

A New Hampshire girl and another member of the theatre party were in the New England Medical Centre in Boston with typhoid fever. Three others were found to have the disease Tuesday. There was one other suspected case.

In New York, it turned out that the actor who joined at Patricia Murphy's was in hospital with typhoid. Inquiries by New York health authorities led to a Connecticut woman in hospital with the illness. She, too, had eaten at Patricia Murphy's that Saturday night.

The vegetarian who declined to eat the popovers did not become ill.

But if the popovers were cooked at the proper high temperature, any typhoid organisms would have been killed, Imperato said.

Imperato said that if the popovers were cooked properly, then some other food was probably the culprit. He said investigators are also considering that salad dressings may have contained the typhoid organisms. All of the theatre party had the same meal, with the choice of salad dressing being the only variable.

As soon as the detectives, known as epidemiologists, realized last week that Patricia Murphy's might be connected with the typhoid outbreak, the New York health department moved to shut it down.

They found that the restaurant closed anyway as part of mortgage foreclosure procedure. Nevertheless, 53 of the restaurant staff, apparently unaware of the foreclosure situation, showed up for work.

They were met by public health epidemiologists and sanitary engineers who conducted interviews and took medical histories and stool specimens for examination in health department labs. All appeared to be negative. Investigators found that at least 78 people worked in the restaurant that night. So far 64 have been located.

Special blood tests were given to persons who reported illnesses during December, and these, too, were negative. Repeat blood and stool studies were being run on those who would have prepared popovers. A person who did have typhoid now might be free of any signs of the illness and never be identified.

Meanwhile, an epidemiologist from the U.S. public health service's Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., is in Massachusetts interviewing everyone concerned and getting a detailed list of the food eaten.

Typhoid, which caused more fatalities years ago, can be controlled most times with antibiotics. But it is still a serious illness, marked by fever, chills and diarrhea.

A chronic carrier can carry the organism for years, lodged in the gall bladder, where "it lives a comfortable existence," Imperato said. New York City has a registry of 70 chronic carriers, some of whom have carried it for as long as 60 years. They are excluded from handling food and instructed in personal hygiene.

"We tell them they can't work in restaurants," he said.

Murder Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Romeo Joseph Lavoie, 32, was charged Tuesday with murder punishable by life imprisonment in the strangulation of Diane Delane, 20, whose body was found Saturday in her bed by the man with whom she had been living.

Enzyme to Help Chart Treatment of Cancer?

BALTIMORE (UPI) — John Hopkins University researchers say they have found an enzyme which may allow doctors to chart the effectiveness of drug and radiation treatments of cancer patients.

Although he is uncertain how it works, Dr. Stephen Baylin, head of a research team, said the enzyme Histaminase may be used as a "marker" in measuring the value of chemotherapy and radiation treatments.

"What we've found is there's an enzyme by the name of Histaminase that is present in the serum of some patients and to a degree present in the tumor tissue of others," he said. "This may provide another potential marker for measuring therapy."

Baylin said Histaminase is found in the blood of some lung cancer patients and in the tumor tissue of sufferers of small-cell cancer, one of the most lethal forms of the disease.

Drugs and radiation are common forms of treatment for small-cell cancer because the disease's rapid rowth precludes surgery. The cancer is often widespread before diagnosis.

The discovery of Histaminase is significant because doctors do not have an accurate method of measuring how much cancer has been killed by drugs or radiation.

"We are in the research phases of this and we don't know as yet how clinically useful it's going to be," Baylin said. "I guess if it's going to have clinical utility, it will be to follow certain patients to see how the chemotherapy is affecting them or how the radiation therapy is affecting them."

Coastal Protection Outlined

Four University of British Columbia students are coming to Victoria Saturday to tell why the coastline and estuaries of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland should be protected.

Brian Copeland, Robin Adams, Anne Coates and Margaret Symon are sponsored by the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association and the Sierra Club of Victoria and will speak at the Newcombe Auditorium, Provincial Museum, at 8 p.m.

The second-year biology students last year completed an extensive coastal study under Nanaimo teacher Peter Croft, funded by an Opportunity for Youth grant.

Bob Dickout, president of TPNSA, said coastline protection is a major environmental issue.

"The matter has been raised in Parliament and a study on coastal protection has been launched by the Environmental Land-Use Committee," he said. "Everyone should get involved in this issue and become informed at what is at stake."

Admission to the meeting is free.

Trudeau To Cuba Friday

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau leaves Ottawa Friday morning for his first official visit to Cuba and two other Caribbean Basin countries, ignoring criticism that his trip to Cuba implies approval for that country's involvement in the current Angolan civil war.

The prime minister, according to high government sources Tuesday, will tell Cuban Premier Fidel Castro bluntly that Canada feels Cuban forces have no business interfering in what Ottawa considers an internal Angolan struggle.

But unless the issue is raised at press conferences during the Canadian prime minister's visit, Trudeau will deliver his message only during private conversations with Castro. Trudeau does not plan to refer directly to the Angolan situation during his four-day visit to Cuba even though he is scheduled to make a major speech Wednesday while in that country.

Former Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has voiced the strongest criticism of the coming prime ministerial visit to the Caribbean communist country. He said it is inexcusable and would be construed as Canadian approval of Cuban intervention in the African country.

But Trudeau, government sources said, though he won't make a major point of the issue, and though he doesn't expect to persuade Castro to withdraw Cuban troops who have spearheaded the advance of communist-supported forces in Angola, will express his disapproval.

The Cuban visit is looked at by the government in the same way as Trudeau's trips to the United States and Soviet Union when one of the countries was involved actively in the Vietnam war while the other was supplying arms openly to one of the combatants.

The prime minister, accompanied by Mrs. Trudeau and his youngest son, Charles Emmanuel, aides, and some senior officials from the departments of external affairs, trade and commerce, energy and finance, and Kamloops-Cariboo Liberal MP Len Marchand and his wife, will spend 11 days in Mexico, Cuba and Venezuela.

He will be accompanied by 48 members of the news media — the largest contingent to accompany him on an official trip since his visit to Red China in 1973.

The three countries were chosen because of their geographical closeness and the fact that with Brazil, they are the Latin American countries with which Canada conducts most of its trade.

The three are also considered important because of their activity in world affairs, including their roles in the Law of the Sea Conference which is seen of great importance to Canada and development of a new economic order for the so-called Third World of under-developed countries.

In the area of commerce, Canada's trade deficit with Venezuela — the largest single deficit which this country has — is of major importance. It is caused by large imports of Venezuelan oil for the Eastern Canadian market, and Canada is trying to persuade that country to take more Canadian exports to counteract the deficit.

Olympic Ticket Lottery A Flop

MONTREAL (CP) — Only 165,000 of a possible six million entries were received by the Dec. 31 deadline for a lottery that will determine who can buy the 22,000 pairs of tickets available to the Canadian public for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Summer Olympics.

Gerry Savard, director of the ticket department for the organizing committee of the Summer Olympics, said Tuesday that more than six million special postcards were distributed at post offices across the country.

Those interested had to fill in a card and affix a special 10-cent Olympic stamp to make it a valid entry.

Savard blamed the poor response on the uncertainty created by the postal strike last fall and the continuing bad publicity surrounding the construction of the main stadium.

The original October deadline was put back because of the postal walkout.

"We may have also printed more cards than we thought we needed," Savard said, "but the strike did cut down on the response."

"As it stands, the odds are about one in seven an entry will be a winner."

Savard said that many people may have sent in more than one entry and that there are no restrictions on the number per person which can be drawn.

Printing the postcards is reported to have cost the post office $60,000, and two cents of each of the 10-cent stamps used was to have gone to the Games coffers.

As a result of the poor response, the Games will realize only $5,300 from the postcards.

The staging of the lottery itself is giving organizers a headache. Originally scheduled to be conducted on national television, the selection process was later changed to four regional television draws when it became apparent the networks could not accommodate a national draw.

Marc Chartier, assistant to the director of spectator services, said even the regional draws have run into problems.

"The first draw was scheduled for Jan. 26 in Montreal but that has fallen through. We've had to scramble around and try and make alternative arrangements but they haven't been confirmed yet.

"Part of the problem is that everybody is in Innsbruck (site of the forthcoming Winter Games) and we're having trouble finding somebody to confirm the new arrangements."

Savard said people will have to buy the tickets in the price range determined by selection of their entry.

Seats are scaled from $8 to $40.

He said he expects people who entered several times and who win the right to purchase more tickets then they can use, will simply not exercise some of their options.

Revenue, Spending Both Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue collected by the 10 provinces and two territories during the 1973-74 fiscal year rose 18.7 per cent from the previous year while spending was up 15.6 per cent, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Gross general revenue totalled $22.442 billion for the 12 months ending March 31, 1974. Gross general expenditures during the same period totalled $22.943 billion.

Here are the totals by province as reported by the agency, with revenue followed by expenditures:

Newfoundland, $561 million revenue, $617 million expenditures; Prince Edward Island, $139 million for both revenue and expendiures; Nova Scotia, $779 million revenue, $785 million expenditures; New Brunswick $679 million, $673 million; Quebec, $6,554 billion, $6.344 billion; Ontario, $7,395 billion, $7,716 billion; Manitoba, $954 million, $947 million; Saskatchewan, $896 million, $801 million; Alberta, $1.988 billion, $1.743 billion; British Columbia $2.353 billion, $2,114 billion; Yukon, $41 million, $44 million Northwest Territories, $102 million revenue, $120 million expenditure.

The figures compiled by Statistics Canada reflect the financial transactions of governments and do not necessarily conincide with surpluses and deficits as defined by the provinces.

Chamber Finds Waste All Over

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 21 41
FOURTH SECTION

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Chamber of Commerce presented Wednesday a stinging report which identified dozens of examples of wasteful governmental expenditures and thrashed federally-inspired bilingualism programs.

The report was prepared after an invitation several months ago by Ron Basford, urban affairs minister, and includes examples of unnecessary expenditures cited by businessmen from throughout Canada.

In bemoaning excessive costs of the government's bilingualism program, the report asked if "perhaps we should propose legislation for a unilingual country?"

The nation's "bilingual problem has become duplication in the worst form," said the report. "The country is spending far too much money to implement a two-language system and everyone suffers."

The report cited senior civil servants receiving paid leaves of absence to study French, which they never use and soon forget.

Translation done by government workers costs about 11 cents a word and only six cents a word by freelance translators, the report said.

The report, which was summarized Wednesday by the chamber's executive director Samuel Hughes in a speech to a service club luncheon, called for abolition of family allowances, federal sales taxes and the department of regional economic expansion (DREE).

Progams concerning government buildings and consumer protection as well as advertising, public relations, administrative and travel expenditures of civil servants were all cited as being too costly.

The chamber, which claims to represent thousands of businessmen across the nation, urged a reduction of the civil service by at least 10 per cent during the next five years and a freeze on wages of civil servants "which are trend-setting and inflationary."

Government employees were often considered as "not having sufficient responsibilities assigned to them to adequately fill their working day."

Many government expenses were written off by the chamber as "ego-tripping". Included in this category were the advertisement of civil service personnel changes, first-class travel accommodations, full-page advertisements of government programs and mailed promotional information on programs which inevitably find their way into waste baskets.

The waste basket of newspaper offices were also filled with late or non-topical news releases written by overpaid civil servants.

"It's hard to understand why taxpayers' own money is used to convince them that government is wonderful," the report said. "Surely this is what political party funds are for."

The report criticized the government's inefficient use of buildings. It said a former tax department building in Saskatoon remains empty while DREE occupies costly space in the luxurious Bessborough Hotel — which was owned by the government-controlled Canadian National Railways and sold for a price the chamber considered inadequate.

"The government has a Cadillac approach to physical properties, art and sculpture, media advertising, graphics and all public relations," the report said. "Our economy can really only afford a compact car."

The chamber's attitude towards crown corporations was exemplified by statements that Air Canada should drop unprofitable routes and the CBC should be abolished if it cannot pay for itself.

The report criticized Canada Manpower for doing "impossible and needless tasks."

Most businesses and workers earnestly seeking an employee or a job no longer use it, the report said.

Jean Picks a Bad Day For a Defence

Chretien

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Chretien, treasury board president, appeared to pick a poor day Tuesday to defend government spending before the Montreal Chamber of Commerce.

On the same day, the Canadian Chamber made public a report identifying examples of what it considers wasteful federal spending. Chretien was telling his audience that there were "a lot of myths that deserve to be destroyed."

One, he said, was the idea that more taxpayers' money is being spent every year on government salaries and administration.

In fact, the federal government spent 5.9 per cent of the total value of all goods and services produced — gross national product — on itself in 1969, and the same proportion in 1974, Chretien said.

He argued that the provinces in the same period allowed their operating costs to rise by one-third in real terms.

And even though the 315,000-member federal civil service has "some whose jobs may be redundant, and others who could work harder," that is the case in any large organization.

Most federal spending is useful, despite claims that it is non-productive, Chretien said.

"Of course, there may be some waste in our programs," he said, "and there may be some money which is badly spent.

"We want to eliminate the waste, but there is not as much of it as some people seem to think."

He repeated that the federal government is tied into many major spending programs, such as health and welfare, which it cannot easily cut.

For example, medical care schemes and hospital care, both programs shared with the provinces, will cost the government $860 million and $1.55 billion, respectively, in the financial year ending March 31.

Chretien said the promise made Dec. 18 to hold down the rate of rise in government spending and to cut $1.5 billion from next year's spending plans showed the government is serious.

They are not cosmetic cuts but real cuts, he said.

But he warned that from now on there is no way the government can further reduce its spending without cutting back government services, grants or payments to the provinces, or without restricting the money available for job creating programs.

Competency Testing For Guns

OTTAWA (CP) — Government legislation which will require any person buying a rifle or shotgun to pass a competency test and obtain a licence has met with conditional approval from the head of a 20,000-member national gun association.

William Jones, president of Firearms and Responsible Ownership, an organization which opposes restrictive gun control legislation, said Tuesday in an interview he is "conditionally satisfied" with government proposals following a meeting last week with Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

Jones said the government has sided with FARO in ruling out the registration of shotguns and rifles as a means of controlling firearms ownership.

He said Allmand told the group anyone wishing to purchase a gun would have to pass a competency test before obtaining a licence. The licence would be renewable every few years but the test would be administered only once.

Jones estimated there are about 10 million firearms in Canada owned by about three million people.

Enforcer's First Test Looming

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation administrator likely will get his first enforcement case within two weeks because of a refusal by a New Brunswick pulp and paper company to follow an anti-inflation board ruling on wage increases.

For the last month, Irving Pulp and Paper Ltd. of Saint John, N.B., has been paying its 500 employees under a new two-year contract which provided a first-year wage increase of 23.8 per cent retroactive to May 1, 1975, a company official said Tuesday.

The board rejected this increase as excessive on Dec. 17 and said the workers were entitled to no more than a 14-per-cent wage hike under the selective controls program.

Last-Ditch Plea For CYC Time

OTTAWA (CP) — Volunteers employed by the dying Company of Young Canadians Tuesday appealed to Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner for more time to fine funds from private sources.

The CYC, with a government-supplied budget of about $6 million in the fiscal year 1975-76, is one of the victims of government plans to reduce the rate of increase in federal spending.

Headquarter's staff have jobs until March 31 and four months' severance pay thereafter but volunteers can be let go with only one month's notice.

The volunteers, who met Faulkner in a closed meeting, asked that treasury board or the secretary of state department provide funds to maintain CYC workers with community groups in their positions for a minimum four months.

"This will allow groups both the time and resources to achieve self-sufficiency and the search for alternative sources of funding," the volunteers said in a brief.

But Faulkner, while saying he would take the proposal to the cabinet treasury committee, held out little hope to the volunteers.

Storm Clouds Gathering Over Jobless Insurance

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A struggle in cabinet is looming over the proposed new changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act which would reduce the number of weeks an unemployed person will be able to draw UIC benefits.

The battle will take place in the next month or six weeks. Part of an amendment package has been approved by cabinet committee and once it emerges from the cabinet, it will be submitted to Parliament with the hope the changes could be passed before the summer recess.

One or two changes have been approved by the whole cabinet, a UIC source said. But the main controversial part of the package still remains to be approved by cabinet.

At present, a worker laid off after only eight weeks on the job can draw unemployment benefits for from 18 to 51 weeks depending on the unemployment rate in the region where he lives, and providing he or she qualifies.

The new proposals in the package would provide that short-term workers will be eligible to receive one week's benefit from each term worked.

Supplementary benefits would continue in areas with high unemployment rates such as the Maritimes and Quebec. Officials in the Unemployment Insurance division claim such proposals would save an estimateed $65 million annually at current levels of unemployment.

"Bunk," said one cabinet source. "The way to reduce the expenditures under the unemployment insurance program is to reduce unemployment. If the bureaucrats would concentrate on cutting down unemployment as well as fighting inflation, the outlay under the unemployment insurance plan would be reduced sharply."

The father of the UIC, Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey, asked for comments on reports that there had been major new changes approved by cabinet, said he had no comment. He suggested, however, the reports were "nonsense" and described them as "deliberate leaks" by bureaucrats anxious to get the plan changed.

One government source said the new proposals are bound to stir up "another struggle" inside the main cabinet when the cabinet committee makes it recommendations.

Another proposal arousing opposition in some cabinet quarters would require workers to hold a job for 12 to 15 weeks before they would be entitled to UIC benefits. At present they are entitled to benefits after only eight weeks.

Just prior to the Christmas recess, Bill C-69 was passed by Parliament. It provided for the government being able to switch more of the financial burden for paying for the fund from the federal treasury to the employees and employers.

Unemployment insurance premiums increased as of Jan. 1.

There will be strong opposition from Quebec and the Maritime provinces to the proposals that workers must hold a job for 12 to 15 weeks before getting UIC benefits. The problem at present is that workers in some areas of the Maritimes and Quebec find it next to impossible to get eight weeks work, let alone 12 or 15 weeks.

Collections from the bumped up employer-employee contributions would "go a long way" to meeting the so-called saving of $65 million which some officials are reported to have estimated would accrue from proposed changes. The cost of administration is now also charged off to the collections from employer-employees under changes made in the act before Christmas, said a cabinet source.

The emphasis on combatting unemployment appears to have been eased up in favor of concentrating on combatting inflation.

"People who are cut off unemployment insurance have to turn to welfare when they are unable to get work," he said.

Today, jobless benefits amount to two thirds of a claimant's weekly insured job earnings up to a maximum of $200. However, the duration of the benefits varies from a minimum of 18 weeks to a maximum of 51 weeks.

The suggested changes — which could cause a struggle in the cabinet — would revise the benefit structure so that claimants can be limited to as little as eight weeks of benefits. The upper limit would be reduced to 50 weeks and workers would require a longer period of employment than at present to qualify for the maximum.

HERE'S A HAIR-RAISING STORY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court has turned a deaf ear to male Marine Corps reservists who want to wear wigs over their long hair during weekend drills to comply with grooming requirements.

The high court rejected without comment their complaint that the ban on wigs invades their privacy and is discriminatory, since women reservists are permitted longer hair and wigs.

In a suit in U.S. District Court in Phoenix, three men complained that members had been "assaulted" at the direction of Capt. Michael Beaughler and hair deemed "unacceptably long or stylish" was cut without their consent.

Beaughler responded that if men were to achieve combat readiness by gas mask training, rope climbing and other activities, wigs could be a safety hazard.

The Supreme Court left standing a decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that an individual reservist has no constitutional right to choose his own hair style in the face of contrary military regulations. The lower court added that the military has a right to govern its affairs "without untoward intervention by the judiciary."

Gad, Sir! Another Gentleman's Club Has Succumbed

LONDON (AP) — St. James's Club, the most elegant mansion in Piccadilly, famous for its vintage port and even more vintage members, has closed its doors forever.

Last November the Guards passed the silver salver for the last time in the pale blue dining room and merged with the Cavalry Club. The splendid Italianate palace that was the United Service Club now stands empty. The United Hunts Club is in liquidation and dukes and earls and masters of foxhounds must seek elsewhere for a stirrup cup called "hangman's blood."

Gone are the Beefsteak, the Portland, the Union and the Royal Aero. The Devonshire is up for sale. The Authors has sold its paintings, books and furniture to meet its debts. The Carlton is considering taking in members who do not belong to the Conservative party, an even bigger survival decision than admitting the party leader, Margaret Thatcher, who happened not to be a gentleman.

One by one the stately pleasure domes known to social historians and high-stakes gamblers as the gentleman's clubs, are succumbing to high labor costs, urban decay and the greedy taxman.

Before the Second World War, some 120 clubs were sheltered in the gracious Georgian mansions around the Court of St. James's, where a well-born chap could get away from worries, women and anything that even faintly smacked of business to a genteel atmosphere of good cigars, mulled claret and obsequious servants. Now fewer than 40 survive.

White's, older than the Bank of England, still hangs in there. So do Brooks's, Pratt's, Buck's and the Reform, which Phineas Fogg left to go around the world in 80 days. But none has a waiting list into the next decade and talking business is pretty much the order of the day.

"Members are being taxed out of existence," lamented Richard Edmonds, secretary of Boodle's, London's second-oldest club, founded in 1762. It stays solvent by allowing women to dine in the annex and encouraging members to use the premises for private functions in the evening hours.

The Guards closed after 165 years of cherished tradition that included drinking toasts from a chamber pot that belonged to one of Napoleon's subalterns.

The Reform Club has just raised its dues to £136 ($272). Four years ago they were £42 then $98.

"When subscriptions were reasonable, a member down from the country could stick his face into the Lords and subsidize his dinner and a room at the club with the £13.50 ($27) per diem," said a club manager. "Nowadays, he's lucky to afford his local golf club."

Who's Who lists Earl Mountbatten as belonging to 16 clubs. Former Tory prime minister Harold Macmillan, who lists six, declined a peerage on the grounds that "there are better clubs than the House of Lords."

At today's prices, multi-memberships are becoming rare, even though most clubs have opened their doors wider to keep going. "Pilling" an applicant with the traditional black ball has given way to spirited membership drives.

Rising real estate costs are pushing members further into the suburbs, so most clubs are crowded at lunch and empty after dark. Clubs that used to invoke stiff hourly fines for members tarrying over the ward table after midnight now have special dinners to ensure there is "life after six."

The stock market decline has soured club investments and endangered loans for long-delayed major repairs. Preservation laws keep the fine old houses from becoming banks and insurance companies but reduce their resale value.

Labor costs are the big killer," said Tony O'Connor, secretary of the Cavalry Club. It used to have a staff of 120 and now gets by with 90. Gone are the retainers who washed the coins before change was given and ironed the newspapers.

O'Connor said lifting the ban on tipping would lessen the pressure for wage rises and make clubs competitive in the labor market.

To stay solvent, clubland's stodgy abodes of misogyny have even evolved to the point where Buck's has a woman secretary, Harriet Pocock.

Gentleman's clubs had their origins in the coffee houses of the 18th century and were often named for their proprietors or a favorite lackey. Brooks was a moneylender and wine merchant. Crockford, a fishmonger; Boodle, a headwaiter; Almack, a valet, and Pratt, a croupier.

White's, the world's oldest club, founded in 1693, was immortalized in Hogarth's The Rake's Progress. Beau Brummell figures prominently in its betting books. It prides itself on having as memiters every prime minister from Robert Walpole to Robert Peel — but Harold Wilson, the incumbent, has yet to make it.

Inflation Spiral In Saigon

BANGKOK (UPI) — The economy, and especially rising prices, are the biggest problem faced by the new South Vietnamese government.

The problem seems to be worst in Saigon, not so much the countryside.

Reports from the South Vietnamese capital say that prices of both necessities and luxuries in the city markets have been rising steadily since last summer.

Living costs have escalated despite a well-organized system of district government shops which sell necessities at low prices.

Most food prices doubled between September and Christmas. A pound of fish which cost 35 cents in September cost 75 cents at the end of December.

Vegetables and cooking oil also cost twice as much, while pork, the main meat eaten in Saigon, now costs $1.50 a pound compared with the September price of $1.

So-called luxury goods have increased even more in price, because no more are being imported.

The reports said a box of facial tissues, which sold once for about 25 cents, now costs $2. American-made brassieres and panties now cost $40 a set.

American cigarettes are no longer available. The best Vietnamese smokes now cost just under $2 a pack. They sold prior to the April 30 Communist takeover for about 60 cents a pack.

Survivors Healthy

KADENA AIR FORCE BASE, Okinawa (UPI) — Two survivors from a sunken Norwegian ship flew to Okinawa today, relatively healthy but fatigued from 20 days adrift on a life raft in the Philippine Sea.

GARDENING

Take Care With Indoor Planting

Daylight is noticeably of longer duration and sunlight more penetrating, both signs that plant growth will be stronger when we sow seeds from now on.

Admittedly most of the sowing will need to be indoors, or at least in an environment approximating that of early May outdoors.

And I think if the beginning gardener who wants to get an early start by sowing indoors remembers that phrase throughout the indoor period there will be less failures.

"Approximating early May outdoors" means recalling the feel of early May.

Daylight comes early, around five, light is strong even though some days may be overcast. When the sun shines, its power is intense.

The air movement is usually brisk and constant so that young growth outdoors becomes "hardened" in its cell structure as it develops moment by moment.

As the sun moves to the western horizon, the air becomes gradually cooler and the young growth responds by ceasing to expand. Again, this results in "hardening" of cell structure, or consolidating the growth made during the long daylight hours.

The gradually changing temperatures, the light intensities and movements of air are the conditions which need duplicating when trying to grow seedlings indoors — with the difference being that the night will be less chilly, the daytime sun less and the wind movement less pronounced than outdoors.

The result is faster growth indoors, growth which must later be "hardened" by gradual exposure to outdoor conditions before the young plants are finally strong enough to be put into the open garden.

When we first attempt seed sowing indoors and the raising of young plants or outdoor growing we are inclined to pamper them far too much.

First, we forget that our home living temperature today is almost 10 degrees C. higher than that required by seedlings of hardy flowering or vegetable annual plants.

A temperature of 10 deg. C. in the greenhouse is just fine after a germination temperature of 16 to 18 deg. C. to get the seeds sprouted.

In the home we must find the cool spot for growing the seedlings.

Next we must consider how to provide strong overhead light from early morning until sunset. Gardeners today are using fluorescent light tubes for this purpose.

Otherwise, seedlings become lanky and weak before the first leaves are expanded. This means a poor root system, for food cannot be manufactured without the aid of expanded leaves.

Week seedlings have little chance of developing into strong plants.

Without fluorescent lighting, seeds may be successfully raised in a three sided sunroom or porch, for in it the light comes from three directions assisting in maintaining even growth in seedlings.

Just as important as temperature and light, is air.

Indoors the seedlings require air circulating around them. Not a chilling wind on a frosty day (outdoors) since they are being raised in a 10 deg. C. atmosphere, but a circulation of the warmer indoor air.

These few pointers may help a lot of new gardeners this year. In our slow springs it pays to have healthy, established young plants to set outdoors at the end of April or early May rather than having to wait until those dates to make sowings of the same seeds in the garden.

Think it over, make your plans, ask your questions, now while there is still time to arrange suitable conditions for the sowing of seeds indoors.

LOST A HOME BECAUSE YOURS NEVER SOLD?
Don't take the chance of this happening again. Phone me first as I am able to arrange "NO INTEREST" interim financing to qualified home buyers. It is a simple straightforward plan.
(a) It enables you to complete your purchase of another home even if yours has not been sold.
(b) You receive CASH on the date of completion regardless whether your qualified purchaser's home has sold or not. These arrangements are also available to contractors, so you won't lose that sale. Phone today for further information.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

9 IN MEMORIAM

DOAN—In loving memory of my dear sister Harriet.
My lips cannot tell how I miss her,
My heart cannot tell what to say;
God alone knows how I miss her,
In a home that is lonesome today.
—Sadly missed by sister Mrs. Alexander Maclean.

LAUGHLIN — In loving memory of a wonderful, dear Dad, Earl Lewis Laughlin, who passed away January 19, 1975.
While in silence he does sleep,
His loving memories I will keep.
My Dear Dad.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by your loving son — Alvin Laughlin — at home with Mum 1959 Kaltasin Road, Sooke, B.C.

RENTON —Catherine Mary — In loving memory of Mother.
Living and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just, to the end of her dass;
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories, she left behind.
—Hector.

RENTON—Catherine May. In loving memory of our dear Mother and Grandmother.
Dear Mother, you are not forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more,
Still in memory you are with us
As you always were before.
—June, Allen Karen-Ann and Clayton.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

Off and again, a leaf blown by the wind
Falls on the broad ocean
'Tis never lost; where'er it fate may blow,
The imprint of its settling's left behind.
And so with every life,
whate'er its kind,
It shapes itself a place,
'tis destined so.
If hence in peace or turmoil
it should go,
Its influence ever lives,
as 'twas designed.

Slashing to Change the Station

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A psychiatrist says prisoners slash themselves as a means of gaining attention. Some have even done it to get a radio program changed.

Dr. F. H. P. Stephens, acting clinical director of the regional psychiatric centre for federal prisoners in Ontario, said most slashings occur among prisoners who have been segregated. A special committee has been appointed by the solicitor-general of Canada to look into segregation procedures in federal prisons.

John Dowsett, director of the prison at nearby Millhaven, said slashing incidents have decreased at his institution but that a problem arises when a prisoner is told by a psychiatrist that he has no psychiatric problems and there is no program to help him.

"Then it becomes a problem of management rather than treatment," he said.

Millhaven has two full-time psychologists and two psychiatrists who regularly visit the institution for a total of 3½ days a week.

But Dr. Stephens said "just pouring 50 psychiatrists into a place" would make little difference to the state of the prisoners. The only way to ease tensions inside prisons would be to create an environment "as varied and enriching as it is outside."

He said the major need is for interaction between prisoners and staff—correctional, maintenance and all other employees of the prison service.

To increase interaction, Dr. Stephens urged a change from the modern prison design of solid metal doors back to bars and removal of the push-button cell locking system so that correctional staff would have to lock and unlock each prisoner's cell individually.

He said the amount of psychiatric help available to a prisoner—one hour a day—is not sufficient when compared with the 23 hours he spends in his prison environment.

Unless the prison service resist cutting staff—the most expensive part of the budget—interaction between prisoners and staff would be further reduced.

"The more we cut staff, the more we cut the only experience that makes prison worth while."

STATING THE OBVIOUS, a traffic warning sign flashes the message to drivers on the freeway outside Vancouver Tuesday. Fog disrupted airport operations and hampered driving, but no serious accidents were reported. The fog was expected to clear late this morning.

Voodoo Jet Exercise Over Ocean

CF-101 Voodoo jets from the 409th squadron at Canadian Forces Base, Comox, will take part in a one-day exercise off the Washington and Oregon coasts in the period from Tuesday until Thursday.

The exercise, named Felix Keynote 76-04, is designed to maintain combat readiness against a manned bomber attack and is part of a continuing training program of the 25th North American Air Defence Command (NORAD).

The Comox aircraft will be joined by F-106 Delta Dart interceptors from the McChord air base in Washington and Kingsley Field in Oregon. Also taking part will be F-101s from both the Washington and Oregon Air National Guard.

Machine-Rounded Logs Make Modern Cabins

CROSS LAKE, Man. (CP) — A modern version of the traditional log cabin may become the most sought-after dwelling in northern Manitoba.

At least that's the hope officials have for an experimental construction program to be based in remote communities north of Lake Winnipeg.

A log-turning plant has been opened recently on the Manitoba Hydro construction site at Jenpeg, and plant manager Don McIvor said it is the answer to a dream for local residents.

"The beauty of this thing is that it's simple," he said as he lined up an 18-foot length of rough spruce timber on the log-turning machine and transformed it into a smooth and uniform log in three minutes.

"It provides the best building material we've ever had, and it grows in our own backyard."

Mr. McIvor, who is mayor of the nearby community of Wabowden, was enthusiastic about the savings homebuyers should be able to realize by substituting logs for other building materials.

He said he knows from personal experience that logs are far more durable than many modern substitutes.

"My grandfather built a log house at Cross Lake in 1885. Over the years it's been remodelled, but the original logs still are there. It's terrible to think of the high prices we've paid for houses built with B.C. fir that only last about 10 years."

The Jenpeg plant, with a staff of 12, can produce enough logs in a day to build an average-size house. The size of the work crew is to be expanded to 40 and other plants are planned for Cross Lake and Norway House, two communities where unemployment has been a chronic problem.

New Democratic Party MLA Ken Dillen, whose Thompson riding includes the area north of the lake, said the plants are one way of reducing unemployment and he hopes the $500,000 set aside for housing in the federal-provincial Northlands agreement will be used for construction of log houses throughout the North.

Log construction has already been approved in principle by the Central Housing and Mortgage Corp.

The key to the Jenpeg operation is a turning machine invented by Ray Fell of Dawson Creek, B.C. The machine rounds logs up to 22 feet long and 12 inches in diameter, cuts a slot in them to prevent splitting and gouges out a groove on one side to make it easier to install wiring and insulation. A saddle machine notches the logs near the ends for a firm fit when joined together.

HUNTERS BATTY IN SEYCHELLES

By ALLAN S. HARMAN

VICTORIA, Seychelles (CP) — The quietness of the tropical night is regularly disturbed in this Indian Ocean island by the sudden blast of a shotgun. It means the hunters are out. Their target—the only one suitable for hunting—is the fruitbat.

There are plenty of bats to hunt. In fact, the animal is regarded as a pest because it destroys such tropical staples as mango, papaya, banana and breadfruit.

Hunting is always carried out at night when the bats are on the move. Hunters travel in pairs, one with a powerful flashlight, the other with a shotgun.

The fruit bat is picked out with the flashlight and the shotgun blasts away. On a good night a pair of hunters can collect as many as 20 or 30 bats. But they have to cover a lot of ground to get such a bag. The noise of the shotgun scares away bats in the vicinity.

"This is one animal people don't need to worry about conserving," a government official said. "The bats have become real pests. It would be good if they could be wiped out, but there is absolutely no chance of this happening."

Visitors, once they overcome their initial distaste at the thought of eating bat's meat, find the food tasty.

Curried, it tastes similar to a chicken curry. The only drawback is the seemingly endless supply of tiny bones that comes with the meat.

It is perhaps the food requirement more than anything else that attracts the Seychellois to bat hunting. As with fishing, the Seychellois do not look on the pastime as a recreation, but as something to put food in the pot.

TAX SHARKS FACE CURB

TORONTO (CP) — Andre Ouellet, federal minister of consumer and corporate affairs, says he plans legislation to control profits of tax discounters who offer cash for income-tax refunds.

The high-profit, but legal, discounters prepare tax returns and pay in advance part of what a refund cheque is worth in exchange for the right to cash the refund chegue when it arrives.

Ouellet said consumers who go to discounters are victims of a heavy interest rate.

"They just don't realize how much they're charged," he said.

NEWS BRIEFS

SALT Talks Begin

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Leonoid Brezhnev opened nuclear-arms talks in the Kremlin with U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger today and said he hopes to go to Washington in the near future to sign the long-delayed new arms-limitation agreement.

Orbit Change

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's $60-million communications satellite has been successfully fired from its earth-orbiting position towards a permanent station 22,300 miles above the equator off the west coast of South America.

Bus Strike Looms

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bus drivers and mechanics of the Winnipeg Transit System voted Tuesday to reject the city's last contract offer, and a union spokesman said a transit strike has been set for next Monday morning.

New Pay Minimum

OTTAWA (UPI) — A new minimum wage for 20,300 employees in industries under federal jurisdiction will go into effect April 1, Labor Minister John Munro said today. The minimum wage will rise to $2.90 an hour from $2.60, while that for employees under age 17 will be increased to $2.65 an hour from $2.35.

Paper Strike Ends

MONTREAL (UPI) — Canadian Paperworkers Union employees of four Quebec paper mills have ratified a new three-year agreement to end a three-month strike, it was announced today. The three-year contract calls for a 14 per cent wage increase in the first year, 10 per cent in the second and eight per cent in the third.

North Sea Hurricane

HAMBURG (UPI) — Hurricane winds of 75 miles an hour swept the North Sea coasts of Germany and Denmark early today, threatening dikes and flooding lowlands.

Hundreds of residents evacuated areas menaced by the rising waters and soldiers, firemen and volunteers worked during the night on dikes already weakened by damaging floods Jan. 3.

One death was reported. A 33-year-old West German was killed when winds swept his automobile into the path of an oncoming car.

Hardest hit by the new storm was the Hamburg area, the Schleswig-Holstein coast and low areas along the Elbe River.

Denmark's southwestern coast also was threatened during the night and police ordered 10,000 persons to be ready for evacuation.

Prisoner Names Killer Guard

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Andy Bruce, a British Columbia Penitentiary prisoner, Tuesday named a prison guard he said he saw fatally shoot classification officer Mary Steinhauser at the end of a 41-hour hostage ordeal at the prison in June.

Judge Philip Govan forbade publication of the guard's name.

Bruce made the statement to a preliminary hearing just before he, Clair Wilson and Dwight Lucas were committed for higher court trial on five charges arising from the incident.

Reading from a written statement first published by the Prisoners Union Committee, an organization which works for improvement of prison conditions, Bruce said the guard first shot him in the jaw, then shot Miss Steinhauser.

Bruce cannot be cross-examined on the statement, which does not qualify as sworn testimony. However, Judge Govan ordered that the statement be placed in evidence before committing the three to trial on charges of illegally confining 15 persons, possession of offensive weapons, attempted escape, attempted extortion and robbery.

The robbery charge was added at the request of prosecutor Tom Fisher and the attempted escape charge was reduced from a charge of escape.

Bruce said neither the guard who shot Miss Steinhauser nor the other guards called a warning before the guns started firing.

A guard smashed a window and "reached in through the window with his gun just as I was pulling Mary away from me with my right arm" he said.

"It was then that I saw his gun buck and I was hit in the jaw, once, then twice, in very quick succession," Bruce said, adding that he fell to his knees, with blood spurting from his jaw as he continued to watch the guard.

"I saw Mary out of the corner of my eye. She was just in front of me, down on her knees, but leaning to her right. She was trying to move toward me and she screamed 'don't shoot him.' "

As Miss Steinhauser screamed, the guard fired again and "Mary fell to her side in front of me," he added.

"Mary was hit by that bullet," he said. The guard fired again, this time through Bruce's stomach.

seconds and watched blood squirting out of my jaw before everything started to close in.

"I remember the last thought I had was that if I didn't move, the blood from my jaw would get into Mary's hair."

The guards, especially the one who fired the fatal shot, disliked both him and Miss Steinhauser, Bruce claimed.

He said prison director Dragan Cernetic had been aware of the animosity but "they give them guns in a situation like the hostage-taking."

He had never intended to harm Miss Steinhauser, he just wanted to get out of Canada, he said.

Earlier, Lucas told the court that he delighted in terrorizing the hostages in the vault because of the "bitterness" he had developed while in solitary confinement.

"I had fun terrorizing those people—I liked it, you know—they had been terrorizing me all my life. What they went through they call terror, but they don't know what terror is."

He told Judge Govan that most people don't care about

The Queen Waltzes Back

CANBERRA (AP) — Australia's new Conservative government today restored God Save the Queen as an Australian national anthem.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser said his government will also recognize Advance Australia Fair, Waltzing Matilda and Song of Australia as national anthems, but God Save the Queen must be played when the Queen or her representative is present.

Prime Minister Gough Whitlam's Labor government, which the Conservatives displaced, made Advance Australia Fair the country's sole anthem to empahsize Australia's independence from Britain, after a national poll in April 1974.

Fraser also announced that the government will again submit names of Australians to the Queen for British knighthoods and other British honors. Whitlam stopped this last year after he and the Queen established a separate Order of Australia system of honors for Australians, which Fraser will retain.

Land-Grab in Lebanon Prelude to Ceasefire?

BEIRUT — Thousands of Palestinian troops from Syria have driven Lebanese army troops from a strategic crossroads position and advanced into the foothills of Mt. Lebanon in an apparent attempt to grab as much territory as possible today before a ceasefire is called.

The clash, about 25 miles east of the war-ravaged capital, was the first between the Palestinians and the Lebanese army, and reinforced an all-out Palestinian and Moslem assault that left most of the countryside under Moslem control.

Official sources estimate 4,000 troops of the Syrian-based Palestine Liberation Army crossed into East Lebanon Tuesday to link up with another 4,000 massing around Chtoura in the Bekaa valley, 25 miles east of Beirut.

An air force reconnaissance plane brought back photos showing scores of army and police posts in the Bekaa region ablaze, one source said.

Lebanese army troops still held the hills between Chtoura and Zahlah and were pounding the guerrillas with heavy artillery, an army spokesman said.

The Syrian government was sending Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam and the Syrian army and air force chiefs to Beirut today to make another attempt at promoting a ceasefire and a Moslem-Christian political settlement.

Meanwhile, the Lebanese national police reported another 155 combatants on both sides killed in fighting at various points around the country and 184 wounded.

Raymond Edde, a leading Christian candidate to succeed President Suleiman Franjieh, told Beirut newspapers after a visit to the United States that a "plot to partition Lebanon is well under way," and although the U.S. government "does not want to get involved, it clearly blesses the partition."

Edde, the only Christian presidential aspirant who has close relations with Moslem factions, said in a telephone interview from Paris that the United States would be "delighted to have Lebanon's Moslem-populated northern and eastern regions given to Syria to make up for Syria's loss of the Golan Heights to Israel."

B.C. Apple Price Jump Forecast

KELOWNA (CP) — British Columbia consumers will be faced with price increases for apple products when the food price freeze ends, according to the general manager of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd.

Since the NDP government imposed the provincial price freeze in October, farmers have been picking up the tab because production and processing prices also were frozen, Ian Greenwood said Tuesday.

The Social Credit government is to decide Feb. 1 whether to continue the freeze.

Greenwood also said the worth of current federal or provincial controls is questonable unless the controls are equitable.

THIRTY MILLION REASONS TO SING

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Promoter Bill Sargent said today he has offered the Beatles $30 million to do a minimum of 20 minutes on closed-circuit television next July 5 anywhere they want in the world.

Sargent, who is promoting a March 9 "battle to the death" between a great white shark and a scuba diver to be televised world wide from Samoa, said of the offer: "I haven't heard yes and I haven't heard no."

"It's a natural sellout," the promoter said.

He said that he could get an audience of at least three million people on closed-circuit television at $25 a ticket.

"Everybody's been trying to get them together again, but I think I can do it," he said.

Sargent said he has spoken to lawyers for George Harrison and believes Harrison is interested.

He said if Harrison decides to do it, he believes the others would agree.

McGeer Won't Oppose $7,000 UBC Pay Hikes

Education Minister Pat McGeer says he will not interfere with salary hikes for University of B.C. faculty which range as high as $7,000 over one year.

The university, located in his Point Grey ridjng, has a faculty complement of 1,600, but because salaries average 17.3 per cent were settled before wage and price controls, increases are not restricted.

McGeer says it has always been the policy of government not to interfere with the inner workings of universities and "I hope it will always be."

The minister's announcement sparked a somewhat quizzical reaction from B.C. Teachers Federation president Bill Broadley in light of the fact that all teacher salary arbitration awards will be subjected to a rollback in line with the 10 per cent guidelines.

Broadley said today McGeer's policies are inconsistent.

"Arbitration awards are just as legal as a contract and to argue that on one hand there will be a rollback on binding arbitration awards for teachers is inconsistent if you can't do it for university professors," said Broadley.

McGeer, however, said universities in B.C. must be able to attract professors with world-wide reputations and must pay competitive salaries.

"You must remember that many people in our university system are not just outstanding in terms of B.C., they are world authorities and obviously we have to hold our share of world academicians.

"We wouldn't want our salary structure to be such that it would be impossible to have such people here."

Salaries paid faculty at University of Victoria from July 1, 1975 to June 30, 1976 are lower in all classifications ranging from a $1,300 discrepancy at the lecturer level to $11,000 difference at level of vice-president. (UBC has four vice-presients, UVic has one.)

Wages for UBC faculty were outlined in a confidential statistical analysis, and UVic bursar Bob McQueen provided the comparative figures for the campus here:

Lecturer, $17,222 at UBC, $15,420 at UVic; assistant professor, $21,598 at UBC and $19,903 at UVic; associate professor $25,305, compared to $24,588; professor at UBC, $33,209 compared with $33,156 on the Island; department heads, $40,618 and $34,713; deans $47,217 and $37,071; vice-presidents, $54,800 and $43,950; president $60,000 and $58,300.

Socreds Plan PR Overhaul

A full review of all government information services is being conducted by Social Credit advertising consultant Dave Brown.

Brown was appointed by cabinet this week for 90 days at about $150 a day.

Premier Bennett said Wednesday Brown's study will include public relations, advertising and publications and all press services provided by government departments, corporations and agencies.

Without providing a "propaganda bureau", said Bennett, the new government wants to correlate all information coming out of the government.

Any central information bureau would be designed to save money and time, rather than duplicate services, he said, and B.C.'s service would not parellel the "huge" system set up by the Alberta government with about 245 people.

Brown will also be looking at the new telephone information service set up late last year by the NDP government and Bennett said he hopes his complete report will be finished before the 90-day period since the government would like to have it before the next session of the legislature.

Brown, 46, was formerly with the Baker Lovick advertising agency in Vancouver and left the firm a year ago to do full-time consulting for the Socreds.

Person In the Way . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Bonner, new chairman of British Columbia Hydro, said Tuesday the crown coproation's new board will be "reconstituted" and will not include the position of executive director, now held by Jim Wilson.

Wilson, an appointee of the former New Democratic Party government, has not been offered any alternative position.

Bonner declined to use the word fired when asked about Wilson's position with B.C. Hydro. The position of executive director will be eliminated at the end of January, he said.

Wilson is the author of a book entitled People In The Way, which dealth with the resettlement planning for people displaced by the flooding of the Arrow Lakes for B.C. Hydro dam projects.

In his book, Wilson was critical of the "soft-headed, short-sighted" attitude of the former Social Credit government.

Bonner said Wilson was in accord with the reorganization of B.C. Hydro's board of directors.

Welcome to Inuvik, the Land of the $7 Pizza

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

INUVIK, N.W.T.—Dear Miss Churcher of The Wall Street Journal:

Be glad that Queen Victoria did not have the opportunity to select Inuvik as the capital of Canada.

If this delightful community just north of the Arctic Circle, on the edge of the Mackenzie River delta, had existed when Queen Victoria was looking for a quaint and distinctively-Canadian capital and if she had fallen in love with Inuvik instead of good old stodgy Bytown, you would have more to complain about in your financial newspaper.

It's not that Inuvik is so cold, as most southerners would automaticaly assume.

Believe it or not, it has been warmer here for the last few days than it was when I left Ottawa in the middle of a not too uncommon cold snap. But then minus 30 degrees Celsius is warm up here.

It's not that Inuvik totally lacks culture. There's the Berger inquiry into the impact of a Mackenzie River Valley gas pipeline on the North that has just started a two-week stand at the Family Hall, within walking distances of every resident.

And there's always the fine selection of television. Thanks to the Anik satellite there's CBC North from Vancouver that gives residents of the western Arctic the distinction of having to stay up to midnight to watch the CBC National news.

It's just that everything is so expensive. And it's so difficult to go anywhere fast, unless you happen to work for or be friendly with an oil company.

Gasoline is more than $1 a gallon. And here you don't turn your car or truck off unless it i plugged in and starts well.

A simply necessity like a candy bar is 25 cents.

Breakfast is $3 in the local cafe, which is about what you would expect to pay at the ritzy Carleton Towers in Ottawa.

And talking about hotels: Here rooms are $39 to $45 a night, with a color television of course.

There's no real milk or fresh fruit juices available. The next shipment isn't due in until the summer. And the artificial stuff is 75 cents a glass.

A medium-sized pizza at the local pizzeria is $7. I haven't priced an A and W hamburger yet.

A taxi ride on the bumpy ice road to bustling Inuvik airport is $9 one way.

And it costs $600 to get here from Ottawa — that's equal to 10 trips to the cultural mecca,

'Please, Daddy . . .'

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Three armed bandits shot and killed a bus passenger because he refused to hand over a plastic bag he was carrying. Inside the bag were two bottles of milk, two notebooks, a pencil and note from the victim's child reading "Daddy: buy a 300-page notebook, one with 100 pages, and a pencil."

New Wrinkle in Potato Chips

TORONTO (CP) — A new element has altered the Canadian potato chips business with the introdution of a United Sates product that costs more and comes in cans shaped like tennis ball containers.

Pringle's Newfangled Potato Chips, manufactured by Procter and Gamble Corp. of the U.S., the big soap and detergent firm, has been winning customers in the Canadian market.

"Pringle's are becoming a very big item," said a spokesman for National Grocers Co., Ltd., the Toronto wholesaler that imports the chips from the U.S. "We're selling a raft of them."

"They cost more than regular potato chips," the spokesman said. "But they're good value because there's no breakage and each chip is a uniform size."

At $1.39 to $1.49 for nine ounces. Pringle's are more expensive than the regular chips, which cost about 89 cents for eight ounces.

In the U.S., Pringle's are estimated to have captured eight to 10 per cent of the market. However, the product is not yet well established in Canada.

The only Canadian-made rival to Pringle's is a product called Munchos, produced by Frito-Lay Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Pepsi-Cola Canada Ltd. Munchos are packed in cellophane bags rather than cans and, like Pringle's, are of uniform size.

Pringle's are made from potatoes that are cooked, mashed and dehydrated. Added to this is water, chemical preservatives, sugar, Vitamin C and salt, all of which is cut into molds and fried.

Each chip is stacked in an airtight, moisture-proof and crush-proof container, packaged in pairs and shipped to warehouse locations.

Pringle's claims that because of the manufacturing process and packaging, its product stays fresh on the shelves for a year, compared to an estimated three months for most potato chips.

But this claim is challenged by Ted Tombs, product manager for Munchos.

"If they sit around in a store's warehouse for a few weeks, they start to get stale," Tombs said. "But our chips are shipped to the stores only, and not to the warehouse."

As to the ordinary potato chip, even its manufacturers admit it is not a perfect product.

Each bag contains some broken chips, some burned, some with green spots, and inevitably lots of crumbs at the bottom. To some, this is part of the charm of the ordinary chip, to others a drawback.

Demand for potato chips increased considerably in the late 1960s, when the flavored potato chip went on the market, with tastes like salt and vinegar, hot dog, sweet and sour, dill pickle and ketchup.

Statistics indicate that each Canadian now munches his way through 6½ pounds of potato chips a year.

Beirut's Central 'Banker' Has Machine-Gun Guards

BEIRUT (AP) — War-torn Lebanon's "central bank" is a 60-year-old money changer who deals in bales of bank notes and cheques from a Beirut town house guarded by hired gunmen.

Beirut's banks have been shut for six weeks by the fierce street fighting. Wealthy Lebanese needing foreign currency to flee the country, businessmen who continue to pay their employees and traders who need cash or foreign exchange for deals must cash their cheques or exchange their pounds with money changers.

Several dozen dealers work the streets of the Hamra shopping district. Half a dozen big dealers — including two Armenians, a Jew, and a Palestinian — handle company deals and other large amounts. The dealers' dealer is Mahmoud Shakarji, who fled from his native Iraq when the 1958 revolution overthrew the monarchy. He sets the rates of exchange each day.

"He is the biggest of us all, bigger than most banks — in fact he is now the 'central bank'," said one money changer who calls Shakarji each day to get the exchange rates.

A teletype machine brings the latest financial news from the world's money centres to Shakarji's tree-shaded villa on Beirut's fashionable Madame Curie Street. Several tough guards with sub-machine-guns patrol the villa and its grounds.

Most of the cheques changing hands end up with Shakarji, who apparently has access to an almost bottomless supply of hard cash in almost any currency.

"If you need 10 million Turkish pounds, Kuwaiti dinars, dollars, gold or whatever, he'll get it for you," said one

RETURN TO LOFFMARK ERA FEARED

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The first meeting between Health Minister Bob McClelland and regional hospital planners was a "disaster," the chairman of the Capital region's hospital board said today.

Art Young said a delegation from the hospital and health planning commission reviewed plans and problems with the new minister Tuesday and got "a definitely negative attitude" on almost every issue.

"We went to see him with high hopes and came away deflated," said the usually placid Young. "We expected an enthusiastic and eager attitude from a new minister and got a definitely negative attitude.

"It would appear the new government has no policy, no money and no understanding of the local situation.

"It gave me the impression that we could be back in the Loffmark (former Socred health minister) era—when local requirements, needs and recommendations were completely ignored by the bureaucrats."

The region's delegation included besides Young, Robert Wallace, the commission chairman; John Clark, the region's director of hospital planning; Dennis Young, the region's executive director and Ken Robinson, land commissioner for the region.

McClelland had deputies Jim Mainguy, Bill Lyle and John Glenwright on hand.

The region's representatives presented eight points which they asked speedy provincial action on, including:

—a phased $3 million replacements program for outdated radiology equipment at Victoria General and Royal Jubilee Hospitals, awaiting government approval for three months.

—approval of future bed allocations for the two major hospitals, already agreed to by representatives from hospitals and doctors.

—authority for functional planning at both hospitals for extensive renovations and expansion, first requested last October.

—agreement on new planning ratios for extended care beds to meet a growing shortage.

—authority for capital spending on a total of 78 projects costing almost $1 million, some of which were submitted to the province for approval last May. One of these is $297,000 for a rebuilding of Jubilee's emergency department.

—a decision on how the region can finance $50 million worth of hospital development in the next five years. Anticipated capital spending this year of over $22 million will exhaust borrowing approved in a referendum four years ago.

The commission has also been pressing the provincial government for approval to buy a $2.5 million site at Douglas and McKenzie for a new acute care hospital. Young said it got no commitment from McClelland Tuesday.

In a letter presented to the minister Wallace said the search for a suitable property began in 1969, one proposal fizzled a year later and local agreement on the continuing need was finally achieved in 1974.

Eight years after recognizing that Victoria General must be replaced for the most part with a new hospital, said Wallace, "progress can be characterized as being fruitless."

Young said today the factor which disturbed him most at Tuesday's meeting was the implication that the regional hospital and health planning commission, formed a year ago, should possibly be abandoned.

"As far as I'm concerned the commission has been the one definite plus in the local hospital field in the past few years," he said.

The commission includes four regional directors, representatives from hospitals and district residents. In his annual report to the commission earlier this month Clark listed 17 projects achieved in its first year.

But he also warned that despite a year of harmonious effort, "not one hole has been dug, not one brick mortared to another, nor one nail driven, and that physical evidence of progress remains singularly absent."

City Parks Vandalism Doubled

Vandalism in Victoria's parks system almost doubled last year, and among the worst-hit victoms were small parks, playing fields and boulevards.

A report prepared by parks administrator Cliff Bate says total damage caused amounted to more than $5,000, compared with $2,833 in 1974.

The vandals' prime targets were four neighborhood parks — Topaz, Stevenson, Hollywood and Macdonald — where damage totalled $2,169.

A demolished swing in Stevenson Park cost $500 to replace, and in Topaz Park the wrecking spree included a door ripped off a dressing room and mirrors, light tubes and other fixtures smashed.

Equally vulnerable were boulevards and decorative areas in downtown Victoria, with damage totalling $2,115.

Someone cut down a cluster of thorn trees on untaxed road allowance at Alston and Langford, and someone else methodically broke 70 brass sprinkler nipples on the Blanshard median, which cost $300 to replace.

Twelve hanging baskets disappeared from lamp posts.

But it wasn't all bad news in Bate's report. Total damage caused to Beacon Hill Park in 1975 was only $524.

Your Chance To Pioneer

A rare opportunity for Victorians to work at a number of pioneer activities is being offered at the Provincial Museum until May 16.

Entitled The Labor of Our Hands, the museum program which began this week features a working history situation in which instruction is given in old-time skills.

Some of the program's offerings which typify the lifestyle of early settlers in Victoria include the building of a Hudson's Bay style log cabin, spinning wool, quilting, making rough furniture and period dress-making.

Programs will be offered on Sunday afternoons and weekday evenings. Families are asked to pick a day and time which will be free for every session in the three-week period.

'Polite' Letter, Then Court May Face Tardy Taxpayers

Victoria taxpayers who don't pay their property taxes on time may be taken to court, if a recommendation of city solicitor Jakob de Villiers is ensorsed by the finance committee and then approved by city council.

The proposal follows concern expressed by Mayor Mike Young in his inaugural address earlier this month, when he noted that uncollected taxes at the end of 1975 totalled nearly $1 million — almost double the 1974 figure.

Young said more than half the total of outstanding taxes was owed by 22 major corporations in the apartment housing and hotel industries.

"Whether this is a reflection of their inability to pay or is simply a device being used by these corporations to finance their current developments remains to be seen," the mayor said.

Noting the trend in recent years, as the cost of borrowing has increased, city officials have expressed the view that the firms concerned are simply using the city as a relatively cheap source of financing.

When taxes aren't paid by the due date they become, in effect, a "loan" from the city to the taxpayer concerned. Yet the penalty or interest rate payable is only 10 per cent in the first year and eight per cent in the second — far lower than that available through conventional financing institutions.

"It's relatively cheap financing for them," says city comptroller Mason Sheldrick. "We assume they find it advantageous to use these funds (outstanding taxes) to finance their enterprises, construction jobs, etc."

The city solicitor's recommendation, to be considered by the finance committee on Thursday, is that the city initiate court action against all taxpayers whose arrears total more than $1,000.

De Villiers says in his report he would write a "polite" letter in each case warning that such action would be taken unless the arrears were settled within 10 days.

He expresses the view that most taxpayers would pay their taxes immediately they are sued. But even if the city were forced to "go all the way" with the court action, in most cases it would still be able to collect the money about two years sooner than under the present system of recovery through property tax sales.

Court actions for unpaid taxes were fairly common in B.C. until the depression years, De Villiers notes.

"Presumably, it then became uneconomic to sell properties for taxes, since in those days the amounts owing on taxes often exceeded the market value of the land. Consequently the municipalities repossessed these lands.

"Under current economic conditions the situation is, of course, very different."

Why Keep Counting?

Merchants in the 400 and 500-block Craigflower have been broken into so many times this past year one store owner has given up counting.

The culprits, they say, are juveniles.

It's been a perennial problem in Vic West. Up to now the businessmen have reluctantly taken their lumps.

But Fred Jacoff, owner of Uncle Fred's Chicken, said today he will ask the Police Board for increased patrols.

At present there are three patrol cars covering the city on the night beat with only one assigned to Vic West.

A police spokesman agreed that wasn't enough. "But what can you do . . . it's really a manpower problem."

Although Gary Small, owner of Vic West Bakery, would welcome anything to curb the break-in rate (his store was broken into eight times last year) he's skeptical increased patrols would succeed without better co-operation from the courts.

"Unless the courts start taking juveniles seriously," he said. "What can anyone do?"

Small said there is a growing frustration among the merchants.

"What's going to happen is someone is going to catch some of these kids in his store and start knocking in a few heads.

"But that probably wouldn't solve anything . . . the kids will just come back and throw a rock through your window."

A spokesman for the Victoria city juvenile squad said a number of arrests have been made but the courts are generally so lenient the entire matter becomes a joke.

The difficulty is, Small said, that the juveniles are on the street the day after they're arrested.

"The courts seem to treat the break-ins as a misdemeanor."

He said he has sought restitution but so far has failed to collect a penny.

$15,000 PAID INJURED MAN

Three Vancouver Island men were among 24 in the province who received awards totalling $75,389 under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act during December.

One of the three, a 36-year-old man was awarded the maximum lump sum award — $15,000. He suffered extensive bone fractures and was blinded in his right eye while coming to the aid of an unknown man who was being attacked by two men on a Vancouver Street.

The second, a 41-year-old man, received $5,305 for injuries received when he was attacked by four youths as he was leaving a beer parlor. The award covers loss of income he incurred during his hospitalization and convalescence.

And the third, a 21-year-old man, was awarded $4,986 for injuries received when a man doused him with a pail of boiling water.

Names and details of the cases are not released by the Workers' Compensation Board which adjudicates all applications for compensation for injuries resulting from criminal acts.

In addition to the lump sum awards, pensions amounting to $919 a month were awarded to three other B.C. men who received permanent disabilities.

A 24-year-old Interior man who was viciously attacked by a gun-wielding youth, resulting in blindness in both eyes was awarded a lifetime pension of $346 a month plus a lump sum payment of $7,500 and $3,198 to cover medical expenses.

A 31-year-old Vancouver man received a $323 monthly pension and $7,500 settlement for an attack which left him with a cerebral concussion and loss of his normal speech function.

Mayor, Glazier Disagree On Development's Density

Two members of Victoria city council disagreed Tuesday on whether a proposed housing development should have high or moderate density, and also whether the city itself should take any part in the planning process.

The site in question is a 4.5-acre tract of hilly land, a mixture of rock and trees, in the Mount Stephen-Cedar Hill area south of Hillside Avenue.

Housing committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier argued that the provincially-owned property lends itself to a reasonably high density of around 80 units, but Mayor Mike Young said he would "vigorously oppose" any density beyond the 50-unit level already approved by council.

And while Glazier wanted the city to be represented on a four-member committee to draw up terms of reference for the appropriate use of the site, Young said he could see no reason why the city should become involved.

That role should be left to the owners, the provincial government, and to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said the mayor.

"I don't think we should involve ourselves any more than we do with a private developer," he commented. "I say absolutely no."

To Glazier, Young added: "If you want to tell me today that you want a higher density on that site, I would have to say that you have lost your marbles."

He reminded the alderman that the land was formerly owned by the city, which only sold it to the province for the low price of $190,000 — one dollar per square foot — on the condition that any housing development there would be a "low-density situation."

Glazier pointed out that even 60 units would be only about half the density permitted under the city's R3L zone for medium-density attached housing.

"I would like to see three clusters of buildings with around 80 units rather than the spreading of two-storey units over this site."

As for the city being involved in the steering committee, Glazier said this would be an opportunity to influence the final form of the development "so it comes out the way we want it."

The committee finally recommended that the matter be referred to the city's Advisory Planning Commission for recommendations.

Street Light Supporters Win

There's going to be a street light on White Rock Street even if most Ten-Mile Point residents prefer darkness.

Walter Reynolds and six other residents won their bid Tuesday to have Saanich's public works committee order a light, at a cost of $360, placed outside Reynold's property at 4035 White Rock.

At the request of the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers Association, Saanich passed a resolution in May, 1974, stating street lighting will not be installed where residents are opposed. The CBRA said Ten-Mile Point residents did not want lighting.

Reynolds and his neighbors won their point on the grounds a light will cut down late-night car parties and attempted break-ins.

Shelbourne Parking Ban Soon Extended to All Week

The parking ban on Shelbourne from Mondays to Fridays will be extended to every day of the week.

Saanich's public works committee decided Tuesday to recommend council take the action to unsnarl traffic problems on one of the busiest streets in the municipality.

Northbound traffic will not be able to stop between 4 and 6 p.m. and will be banned from parking from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Southbound traffic will be unable to stop between 7 and 9 a.m. and there will be no parking from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

About 40 residents of Viaduct Avenue were told $6,000 will be put in the 1976 budget to remove rock on the north side of the street and widen the street to about 20 feet.

Warning signs will also be posted near the crest of the hill where motorists are faced with a blind spot.

It was agreed that Kenneth Street be closed and a road built at the rear of properties accessing on to Douglas between Kenneth and Hess at a cost of $15,000.

The committee was told the provincial department of highways will pay the costs of land acquisition and relocation of driveways that now front on Douglas.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren was authorized to initiate $224,300 worth of work designed to improve Saanich's water distribution system. The work consists of laying mains on Viewmont and West Saanich, as well as at Royal Oak school.

Warren was also given permission to proceed with work designed to increase sewer capacity in the Gorge area, west of Harriet and north of Gorge Road.

Sound Dream Snuffed, Lodge Hope Rekindled

Dreams have died for two young men.

And, just north of Ladysmith on one of the most enchanting pieces of land you could hope to find, once-bustling Yellow Point Lodge sits empty and alone, waiting to be reborn.

In a little cabin nearby, 83-year-old Gerry Hill lives with his wife Elizabeth and son Richard and remembers what it was like when he built the lodge just before the Second World War.

"It was opened before it was finished," he says with a grin. "I had customers stepping on my heels all the time. And we were always fully booked."

In those early days, you had to book almost a year ahead if you wanted to be one of the 80 who stayed at the lodge or in the cabins on the beach.

And year after year the same people would come back to Yellow Point to relax by the giant rock fireplace in the wood-beamed lounge, wander the trails through the trees that cover the 170 acres or swim and sail. Gerry Hill never had to advertise.

No wonder they came back.

This was no ordinary holiday place. It was a retreat, a resting place, one where you were not a stranger but "one of the family."

"In those days, guests paid $15 a week all found, with five meals a day," says Hill. "And I made more then than I can now."

"We always had low rates and things like fishing trips, water skiing and boating were all free.

"But then we were allowed to operate as we wanted. There were no wage guidelines and, although we were netting very little, we managed to get along by using students from all over the world who were glad to have the experience working here for a while.

"And there were no heavy taxes," Gerry adds with a wry smile. "When I bought the place, the land tax was $15 a year. That seems incredible but there was nothing here then. Now the tax is something like $10,000 a year and you just can't run the place like we used to, you can't cope with today's prices."

It was for partially this reason — and because Hill thought he had lost a little of his zest and felt the lodge should go to younger hands—that he decided to sell Yellow Point three years ago.

There were plenty of potential buyers but Hill wanted the beautiful forest left in its natural state. He didn't want it logged or turned into a subdivision.

And so he sold to Bill Snow and Brian Nisbet, two young ex-Toronto men who are partners in Timbre Sound, Industries Ltd. a Vancouver recording studio. Snow, who lives in Vancouver, and Nisbet, now in Nanaimo, continued to run Yellow Point, although not too profitably, as a lodge for the last three years. But all the time they had a dream.

They, too, wanted to keep the forest in its natural state and to convert the lodge into a recording studio that would serve as a retreat for the big-money stars of the rock music world. They had plans to redesign the lounge with a control room at one end.

Snow and Nisbet liked to point to the great success enjoyed by the Caribou Recording Studio in Colorado, home base for the rock group Chicago where superstar Elton John has recorded three albums. That studio was built on an isolated ranch with luxurious facilities. It is booked, solid for the next two years and is reaping fantastic profits.

low

And, said the pair, Yellow Point could be just like that.

They had hopes of stars like Alice Cooper, and groups like the Hudson Brothers and the Bachman Turner Overdrive coming off the concert circuit to unwind and record at Yellow Point.

But it wasn't to be.

In a bid to raise the cash needed to convert the lodge into a studio, Timbre Sound went public. But it didn't get the support.

"Going public caused us no end of problems," Nisbet said in Nanaimo recently. "People in this province are loath to accept anything other than your basic industries."

And so Timbre Sound has packed up and pulled out and has sold Yellow Point back to Gerry Hill. He has employed Bob and Jocelyn Pederson of Vancouver, a couple who used to stay at the lodge regularly a few years ago, to manage it and plans to reopen this summer.

When I popped up Tuesday for a chat with Hill and a glimpse of the lodge, it was shrouded in fog but still beautiful. And I bumped into young Gina Sperling of Prince George, who will be the new cook. She was having a look around, too, and was impressed.

Sharing the Timbre Sound people's disappointment is 15-year-old Richard Hill, who plays bass guitar in his own local group and, says his dad, "just lives for rock music."

Hill plans to run Yellow Point as a lodge again for a year "and see how it goes." And Nisbet says he and Snow haven't given up all hope. They want Hill to keep an eye on their Vancouver studio and, if it becomes more and more successful, they hope Gerry himself will build a sound studio in the lodge and then lease it back to them for a 15-year period.

Gerry smiles at that.

"But it's still a pinwheel deal, isn't it? I mean, they have to strike it first, don't they?

"Perhaps if they can find another John Elton or Elton John, whichever it is — then we'd consider it."

Olympic Lottery A Flop

MONTREAL (CP) — Only 165,000 of a possible six million entries were received by the Dec. 31 deadline for a lottery that will determine who can buy the 22,000 pairs of tickets available to the Canadian public for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Summer Olympics.

Gerry Savard, director of the ticket department for the organizing committee of the Summer Olympics, said Tuesday that more than six million special postcards were distributed at post offices across the country.

Those interested had to fill in a card and affix a special 10-cent Olympic stamp to make it a valid entry.

Savard blamed the poor response on the uncertainty created by the postal strike last fall and the continuing bad publicity surrounding the construction of the main stadium.

The original October deadline was put back because of the postal walkout.

"We may have also printed more cards than we thought we needed," Savard said, "but the strike did cut down on the response."

"As it stands, the odds are about one in seven an entry will be a winner."

Savard said that many people may have sent in more than one entry and that there are no restrictions on the number per person which can be drawn.

Printing the postcards is reported to have cost the post office $60,000, and two cents of each of the 10-cent stamps used was to have gone to the Games coffers.

As a result of the poor response, the Games will realize only $5,300 from the postcards.

The staging of the lottery itself is giving organizers a headache. Originally scheduled to be conducted on national television, the selection process was later changed to four regional television draws when it became apparent the networks could not accommodate a national draw.

Marc Chartier, assistant to the director of spectator services, said even the regional draws have run into problems.

"The first draw was scheduled for Jan. 26 in Montreal but that has fallen through. We've had to scramble around and try and make alternative arrangements but they haven't been confirmed yet.

"Part of the problem is that everybody is in Innsbruck (site of the forthcoming Winter Games) and we're having trouble finding somebody to confirm the new arrangements."

Savard said people will have to buy the tickets in the price range determined by selection of their entry.

Seats are scaled from $8 to $40.

He said he expects people who entered several times and who win the right to purchase more tickets then they can use, will simply not exercise some of their options.

Revenue, Spending Both Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue collected by the 10 provinces and two territories during the 1973-74 fiscal year rose 18.7 per cent from the previous year while spending was up 15.6 per cent, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Gross general revenue totalled $22.442 billion for the 12 months ending March 31, 1974. Gross general expenditures during the same period totalled $22.943 billion.

Here are the totals by province as reported by the agency, with revenue followed by expenditures:

Newfoundland, $561 million revenue, $617 million expenditures; Prince Edward Island, $139 million for both revenue and expendiures; Nova Scotia, $779 million revenue, $785 million expenditures; New Brunswick $679 million, $673 million; Quebec, $6,554 billion, $6.344 billion; Ontario, $7,395 billion, $7,716 billion; Manitoba, $954 million, $947 million; Saskatchewan, $896 million, $801 million; Alberta, $1.988 billion, $1.743 billion; British Columbia $2.353 billion, $2,114 billion; Yukon, $41 million, $44 million Northwest Territories, $102 million revenue, $120 million expenditure.

The figures compiled by Statistics Canada reflect the financial transactions of governments and do not necessarily conincide with surpluses and deficits as defined by the provinces.

The Quebec figures include income from Quebec Pension Plan contributions while figures for other provinces, which subscribe to the Canada Pension Plan, do not include pension income or spending.
